BRYAN STATES WHY HE DISAGREED WITH WILSON OVER GERMAN NOTE

SHOULD BE BOUND BY OTHER TREATIES

Resigned Secretary of State Declares Frank Statement Should be Made to Germany

TWO POINTS OF DIFFERENCE

Are Suggestion of Investigation And Warning be Given Americans Concerning Travel

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—Secretary Bryan issued the following statement this afternoon:

"My reason for resigning is clearly stated in my letter of resignation namely, that I may employ as a private citizen the means which the president does not feel at liberty to employ. I honor him for doing what he believes to be right, and I am sure that he desires as I do to find a peaceful solution to the problem which has been created by the action of the submarines.

"Two of the points on which we differ, each conscientious in conviction, are first, as to the suggestion of investigation by an international commission, and second, as to warning Americans against traveling on belligerent vessels or with cargoes of American ammunition. I believe this nation should frankly state to Germany that we are willing to apply in this case the principle to which we are bound by treaties to apply to disputes between the United States and the thirty countries with which we have made treaties providing for the investigation of all disputes of every character and nature.

"Those treaty negotiations under this administration make war practically impossible between this government and those thirty governments.

"No treaty was entered into with Germany but I cannot see why that should stand in the way when both nations indorse the principle."

FUSION CABINET NOT CONSIDERED

"Plenty Good Democratic Material," Says White House Statement Denying Rumor.

DANIELS WILL NOT RESIGN

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—It was denied at the White house today with much emphasis that the administration had any thought as was reported of a coalition cabinet.

There is no necessity for one it was stated, and "whenever there are places to fill, there is plenty of good Democratic material."

A strong denial that any member of the cabinet was about to follow Secretary Bryan into retirement was given out from the white house today.

A rumor that Secretary Daniels had already resigned was answered by Daniels himself who personally announced that "all nine members of the cabinet are behind the president."

NOT TO SURRENDER AMERICAN RIGHTS

President Wilson Today Stands Firm on Policy of American Protection to its Citizens.

NO MATTER WHAT COST MAY BE

Secretary Bryan's Resignation Has Solidified the Cabinet, it is Asserted.

BULLETIN.

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—Transmission of the German note to Berlin began just before two o'clock this afternoon. It was between 2,100 and 2,200 words long split into four sections.

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—Facing the greatest crisis in recent American history President Woodrow Wilson stood firm today on the policy of no surrender of American rights. He was prepared to emphasize the rights of American protection to American citizens wherever they may go no matter what the cost. Secretary Bryan's resignation has solidified the cabinet.

Counselor Lansing, who will become the acting secretary of state, announced after a conference with the president that the German note will be coded and dispatched some time before night. He said it would be made public some time Friday morning.

James Bassett Moore, who resigned as counselor of the state department, owing to the difference of opinion with Secretary Bryan, called on the president today. It was rumored that he would become counselor under Lansing.

Secretary Bryan this morning before leaving for his home said, "My statement will be ready as soon as I cease to be secretary of state." The statement will not come before night as he ceases to be secretary when the note is dispatched.

Lansing announced that Assistant Solicitor Anderson will act temporarily as counselor. Lansing did not seem to think that a new secretary of state would be named at once.

President Wilson left for an automobile ride at 10:50 a. m. today. He was accompanied only by the chauffeur and a secret service man. As the machine turned into the avenue a party of 50 out-of-town visitors recognized him and cheered. The president responded by lifting his hat.

LADY SALSARY SUNK

British Steamer is Torpedoed Without Warning Today

(By United Press.)

London, June 9.—The British steamer Lady Salsary was torpedoed without warning and sank in five minutes this morning off the coast of Harwich. One member of the crew was drowned and two are missing. Eight others were landed at Harwich and eight others are reported to have been picked up by fishing boats.

—Mrs. Homer Bell and daughter, Lillian of Huntington, W. Va., are the guests of the Misses Alice and Lenora Norris.

ARE DIVIDED IN THEIR OPINIONS

Some Local Democrats Censure Bryan and for Resigning and Others Believe it Will not be Damaging.

IS GENERALLY REGRETTED

Former Lieut. Governor Declares Premier's Withdrawal Will not Embarrass Wilson.

Leading Democrats here were divided in their opinion of William Bryan's resignation as secretary of state. Some were disposed to criticize "The Commoner" for his hasty action, in the belief that his resignation would embarrass the Wilson administration. Others looked upon it philosophically and declared that Bryan's withdrawal from the cabinet would not make the international situation any more critical.

Frank J. Hall, former lieutenant governor of Indiana, expressed the belief that Bryan's resignation would not change the policy of President Wilson in regard to his negotiations with Germany in the least. He also took the optimistic view that the administration would feel no ill effects from the upheaval in the cabinet. He said he thought the president was conducting the negotiations with great success and that he would adjust the differences between the United States and Germany satisfactorily.

"I deeply regret that differences have arisen between the high officials of the government at this period," he declared, "yet I have full faith in the wisdom of President Wilson being able to select a discreet and able successor to Secretary Bryan and that Secretary Bryan will not embarrass the administration with any antagonisms of these differences. I believe the foreign policy of our government has been wisely administered up to the present, but the near future may develop arbitration."

Some other Democrats here would not be quoted on the subject. Some local admirers of Bryan, however, who have always followed him in his various political diversions, regret that he has not stood up under fire. Others were bitter in their denunciation of him because they believed it would damage the cause of the Democratic administration.

"We can get along without him," remarked one Democrat this morning with some heat, referring to Bryan, and that expressed the opinion of many.

FAMILY HAD CLOSE CALL

House Was in Flames When Occupants Awakened

A small house on the Mrs. Charles Hugo farm, west of the city, was destroyed by fire last night at eleven o'clock. Thomas Groves and family lived in the house and the family had a narrow escape. Mrs. Groves was awakened by the smoke and found the entire back part in flames. The house burned quickly and the family lost all of the household goods. The house was a three room structure and the fire is believed to have started from an over-heated stove in the kitchen. Mr. Groves is employed by William Posey.

The seventeenth annual reunion of the Rush-Fayette association will be held Sunday at Brookside park, Indianapolis. A program has been arranged and one of the features will be the basket dinner at noon.

CHIROPRACTOR ARRESTED TODAY

William H. Monks, Accused of Practicing Medicine Without License Contrary to Law.

THREE CHARGES ARE FILED

Affidavits Signed by Dr. W. T. Gott, Secretary of State Board of Medical Examiners.

William H. Monks, of the firm of Monks and Monks, chiropractors, was arrested today on three charges of practicing medicine without a license, filed by the state board of medical examiners. He was arraigned before Judge Sparks and was released on bond in the sum of $50 in each case.

The affidavits were filed by Dr. William T. Gott of Crawfordsville, secretary of the state board of medical examiners. In the three affidavits, William H. Monks is charged with "unlawfully engaging in the practice of medicine, surgery and obstetrics" without a license contrary to the law.

Three separate offenses are charged. The first affidavit alleges that he practiced without a license on May 5; the second on May 10 and the third on May 17. The affidavits were approved by Prosecutor Stevens.

The firm of Monks and Monks has offices in Shelbyville and Rushville. Their local office is located on the second floor of the Miller law building and they have been here for about six months. William H. Monks has engaged the law firm of Watson, Tittsworth and Green to defend him, and the case promises to be hard fought, as the firm of Kiplinger & Smith has been employed by the state board to assist in the prosecution.

The case here is one of the many that have been filed in the state against chiropractors. In practically every city in which they have been doing business the state has filed charges. An attempt was made at the last session of the legislature to get a bill through which would place the chiropractors under a state board and place them on the level with physicians. The bill failed to pass.

Mr. Monks appeared in the court with his attorney, but did not enter a formal plea to the charges.

ORDERED TO STOP THEIR PURCHASES

American Business Men in Berlin Asked to Preserve Funds Pending the Negotiations.

IDEA OF LEAVING IS SCOUTED

By CARL W. ACKERMAN.

(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Berlin, June 9.—American business men here have received orders from America to discontinue their purchases and preserve their funds pending the outcome of the Lusitania negotiations.

George Atwood, secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce, scouted the idea that there was serious danger of a break.

"No one here is at all afraid," said Atwood. "If diplomatic relations are broken off American business men will not leave Berlin."

EXCURSIONISTS HAVE GOOD TIME

Cincinnati Tourists Compliment Authorities for Excellent Accommodations Received.

TWO SECTIONS COMING HOME

Premature Scare When Marian Carney Was Lost, But She Was Later Found on the Train.

More than nine hundred excursionists arrived here last night between nine and ten o'clock from Cincinnati where they spent the day. The occasion was a picnic arranged by the Christian Sunday Schools of Rushville and Winchester, Ky., which some time ago held a contest.

The train left here yesterday morning at seven o'clock and arrived in Cincinnati at nine-fifteen and practically all of the excursionists were at the Zoo by ten o'clock or shortly afterwards. About one hundred and fifty persons had to stand up on the way down because the crowd was larger by two hundred persons than was anticipated.

Coming home, however, the C. H. & D. arranged to care for the crowd and two trains were provided, the first train leaving Cincinnati at seven o'clock and arriving here at nine-fifteen and the second section following close behind. The street car company lacked two cars of having enough to haul the crowd to the Zoological Gardens because there were so many more people than were expected. It was not long, however until enough cars had been provided.

Many of the excursionists today were praising the railroad, and street car companies and the Zoo authorities for the excellent accommodations. Everything moved off smoothly and there were no unavoidable delays.

Coming home, though, there was a premature scare which caused some uneasiness but which amounted to nothing in the end, because Marian Carney, the little daughter of Clarence Carney, was thought for a time to have been lost.

Mr. Carney placed her on the second section of the returning train with Mrs. Kelso and the little daughter of Henry Wilson. There were no seats in the car and Mr. Carney started out to find one. When he returned Mrs. Kelso and the children were gone. Mr. Carney was worried but before the train arrived he learned that they had found seats on the first section.

DIRECTORS ARE TO MEET

Chamber of Commerce Board Called For Friday Night

The board of directors of the Rush County Chamber of Commerce will meet Friday evening at seven-thirty o'clock in the office of the president, S. L. Trabue, for the purpose of fixing up plan for the collection of dues. The dues were recently reduced to twenty-five cents a month, payable quarterly. The directors will also consider a suggestion to call a meeting of the boosters for the Dixie Highway "airline" route from Cincinnati by way of Brookville and Rushville.

FRANK'S APPEAL DENIED.

(By United Press.)

Atlanta, June 9.—Leon M. Frank failed today with his appeal to the state prison board of a commutation of sentence of death to life imprisonment. The adverse recommendation to the governor was made by a majority of two to one.

A Hat For Every Gown

Nowadays it is the rule of the well dressed woman to buy less expensive hats and more of them.

Instead of one or two elaborate creations she prefers a collection of more reasonably priced chapeaux so that she may have a hat for every gown.

And milady's modiste has risen to the variety of attractive headgear to sell at modest prices.

Just now the quotations for millinery are unusually attractive as anyone can tell who watches the advertising columns of The Daily Republican.

ATTENTION, Ladies and Misses!

Look these brands over Carefully. They will do to tie to
"Redfern"—Ladies' and Misses' "Ready to Wear."
"Carter" and "Mentor"—Underwear
"Warners"—Rust Proof Corsets
"Kayser"—Silk Hose and Silk Gloves
"Topsy"—Non-tearable Hose for Children
"Paul Jones"—Middies and Blouses
"Kirsch"—Adjustable Extension Rod
"May Manton"—Patterns

Fix these firmly in your minds together with the fact that they cost no more than others. Then bring your money where it will bring you the best possible returns.

THE BEST PROOF

Given by a Rushville Citizen.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used— they brought benefit.

The story was told to Rushville residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence.

Has proven the result lasting. The testimony is home testimony. The proof convincing.

It can be investigated by Rushville residents.

Harrison Levi, 931 N. Sexton St., Rushville, Ind., says: "I had to get up several times at night to pass the kidney secretions, which were sometimes attended with pain. I had severe backaches, too. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Johnson & Co.'s Drug store and it did not take them long to make me well. The pains left and the action of my kidneys became regular."

(Statement given June, 1910).
OVER TWO YEARS LATER, Mr. Levi said: "I am still free from kidney weakness, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills."

RESULTS SHOWN BY CAMPAIGN

Department of Agriculture Making
Headway Teaching "Diversification" of Crops.

SOME ARE VERY AMUSING

Urges That Robins and Bluebirds be Encouraged—Pig Clubs Proving Successful.

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—"Diversification" of crops is one of the scientific farming tenets being pounded home today by the Department of Agriculture. It is getting results, but some of the results of the campaign are amusing as well as gratifying. An expert of the Department received word from a southern farmer that he was "diversifying" by quitting sugar planting and using all his land instead to raise tomatoes.

The Department's plan is to foster production of home gardens, encourage thrift by teaching the people to can fruit and vegetables for home use—to have farmers grow their own hay, peas, corn, potatoes, oats and some cane or sorghum for syrup, and to produce their own meat supply, if possible. In the south the Department's experts are particularly driving in the idea that there is almost always some waste land which could be profitably used to raise live stock for the family meat supply at least.

"Encourage the robin and bluebird" is the advice of the Department of Agriculture biologists. These birds will more than compensate for occasional depredations by the assistance they render in killing undesirable insects, according to the experts.

They can be prevented from eating desirable fruits, it is pointed out, by providing them with a supply of wild ones for winter diet when insect food is scarce.

An aerial machine which can fly 2,400 miles without a stop is a marvel to which attention is called by the Department of Agriculture in a bulletin on bird migration. "The golden plover is the record breaking flyer, it is stated. The bird can make the 2,400 miles in 48 hours, too, and use only two ounces of fuel in the shape of body fat. The bird observers also note that a thousand-pound aeroplane, if as economical with fuel, would consume only one pint of gasoline in a 200 mile flight. The to-and-fro motion of a bird's wings, it is related, also appears uneconomical, compared to the almost total lack of lost motion in an aeroplane's propeller.

Warning against the European pine moth as a ravager of forests is being issued by the Forestry Bureau. This pest eats out the new buds in such a way that timber is permanently and seriously damaged. As the moths feed mostly on young trees between 6 and 15 years old, it stunts their growth. Some trees are rendered unsightly, crippled and of no commercial value.

Destruction of the infected buds is the only way found so far of combating the new pest. Insecticides will not reach it after it gets into winter quarters. Pruning of the infected buds and twigs is said to be the most successful ruse against the moth. A trace of pitch at the base of the hole where the larvae enters is the test to find the pine moth.

"Pig clubs" are a new enterprise attaining increased success this spring and summer, according to reports being received daily at the Agricultural Department. A "pig club" is practically a contest of boys—and girls, too—in raising pigs. Bankers are lending money to the children to buy a pig to raise.

The new movement to encourage children to take an interest in agriculture generally and stock raising particularly is said to have started in Arkansas. It has attained great proportions in Georgia, where pig clubs are now operating in 14 counties, carried on by the banks which have lent money to purchase purebred pigs.

In other counties promoters of pedigree live stock or wealthy citizens are advancing the money to the pig club members.

In some places the boys and girls who wish to buy a pig get the money on their individual notes. In others the banks require endorsements of the parents. This movement instills thrift and often is the beginning of new bank accounts. One bank at Macon, Ga., has set aside $500 to loan to pig clubs.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY

(By United Press.)

Bloomington, Ind., June 9.—While a phonograph wheezed from the center of the athletic field today—long distance runners ambled around the cinder oval of Indiana university. Several sprinters streaked it for the tape while trying to tread on the tails of a couple of whippet hounds. These were Coach Childs' hopeful track athlete. He uses the music to gauge the stride of the distance men and the hounds to pace the dash men.

Prohibiting the Sale, Discharge and Firing of Fireworks and Other
Pyrotechnics and to Limit Their Storage Within the Corporate Limits of Rushville, Indiana.

SECTION 1—Be it ordained by the common council of the City of Rushville, Indiana, that the discharging, firing and use of all fire crackers, rockets, torpedoes, Roman candles and other fireworks or substances designed and intended for pyrotechnical display and all pistols, guns, canes, cannons and other appliances using blank cartridges or caps containing chlorate of potash mixture, be and the same are hereby prohibited; Provided, that the common council of said city may by order duly made permit the public display of fireworks by properly qualified individuals; and provided, further, that such display or displays shall be of such character and so located, discharged, and fired as shall not be hazardous to surrounding property or endanger any person or persons. Such permit for such public display of fireworks shall not be granted except that the person, persons, firm or corporation desiring to give or make such public display shall file a written request therefor with said common council, which said application shall give a detailed description of the kind, character and nature of the fireworks, the proposed care and storage of said materials, and shall set forth the place or places where said display is proposed to be given.

SECTION 2—It shall be unlawful for any person, persons, firm or corporation within the corporate limits of the City of Rushville, Indiana, to keep or exhibit for sale at retail or wholesale, any fireworks, fire crackers, rockets, torpedoes, Roman candles or substances designed and intended for pyrotechnical display, or any pistols, guns, canes, cannons, or other appliances using blank cartridges or caps containing chlorate of potash mixture.

SECTION 3—Any person, persons, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be fined not less than $10.00 or more than $25.00, and in case of the storage or sale of fireworks, each day shall count and be held a separate offense.

SECTION 4—All ordinances and parts of ordinances in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 5—This ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage and the publication thereof as required by law.

Society News

Dr. Gilbert's Sunday School class will have a ten cent social, at the home of Mrs. John A. Tittsworth, 902 N. Main street, Friday afternoon at 2:30. Each member is entitled to bring five guests.
Miss Nelle Retherford entertained twelve girls at dinner today from Glenwood. They brought well filled baskets. The girls were those in Miss Retherford's school at Glenwood the last term.
Members of the local corps of the Salvation Army surprised Mrs. N. A. Sharp, wife of the captain, last night which was her birthday anniversary. She returned home and found the house crowded with guests and supper prepared.

The Woman's Home Missionary society of St. Paul's M. E. church will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. R. C. Hargrove, 120 West Seventh street. It will be the time for mite box opening and the election of officers will take place. The presence of all the members is urged.
Miss Mary Louise Walker, daughter of Mrs. Alexander Walker, and Joseph S. Michael, well known people of Milroy were married yesterday by the Rev. Clyde S. Black. After a short trip they will be at home in Milroy, where Mr. Michael is the agent for the Big Four railway.
The marriage of Miss Jessie Cronin of Richmond to Francis C. Moorman of this city took place this morning at eight o'clock at the St. Mary's Catholic church in Richmond. Mrs. Moorman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Cronin, and Mr. Moorman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moorman of this city.
Miss Mary Moorman of this city a sister of the groom, was the bridesmaid and Ivan Coyne of this city, was the groomsman. Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home in Ninth street.
The out of town guests who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moorman of Rushville, the bridegroom's parents, Miss Mary Moorman, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moorman and son Master Eugene Mrs. James Mullin and Miss May Madden and Ivan Coyne all of this city, James Cronin of New York City and Miss Ida Madigan and Miss Margaret Fulwiler of Dayton.
Mr. Moorman and his bride will depart tonight for a short wedding trip and upon their return will be at home at 1003 South Eighth street, Richmond.

The Misses Leonore and Alice Norris entertained this afternoon and will again this evening with "On The Old Plantation," which consisted of a program of songs and sketches of life on a southern plantation by Mrs. W. D. Long and son, W. Ballard Long, of Indianapolis formerly of Kentucky. The decorations gave appropriate setting for the readings and songs. There were over one hundred invitations out. A one-course luncheon was to be served this evening and the program continued.
In the parlor was a miniature old garden, with lattice work representing the fence, and there was the gate, too. To add to the realism of the setting, small bales of cotton were placed about the house and on some of them rested little pickinny dolls.
The parlor was a mass of flowers and plants. The twining wisteria, which was in bloom, made the program more realistic because one of Mrs. Long's sketches opened with reference to wisteria. Then there were palms, ferns, asparagus, roses, geraniums, honeysuckle and peonies. The dining room was decorated with cherry twigs bearing ripe fruit hanging from the chandelier and baskets of roses on the table.
Mrs. Homer Bell of Huntington, West Virginia, who, with her daughter, Miss Lillian, are the house guests at the Norris home, dressed as a colored mammy, received the guests and introduced them in colored dialect.
The songs on the program were so arranged that they gave atmosphere for the readings. Mrs. Long is a native of Georgetown, Kentucky, and comes from the old Virginia families of Ballards, Brents, Hordes and Dabneys' who were Kentucky pioneers and have long figured as leading citizens of that state. She has a charm and grace that make her sketches exceptional rather than ordinary. She possesses the native charm of a typical Kentucky woman with the additional pleasing voice and droll manner characteristic of a southern woman.

Bryan's Resignation.

William J. Bryan, who late yesterday resigned as premier of the Washington cabinet, has been called an opportunist and some people—many of whom professed to be his friends—assert that his spectacular leave-taking at this critical time is conclusive proof that he acts always with self aggrandizement in view.

No matter what one's opinions in regard to Mr. Bryan's past actions may be, it must be generally admitted that his resignation at this time is a serious thing and that it did not come purely from patriotic motives. There is little doubt but that Bryan is a man who will capitalize public opinion, but is hard to believe that he would do it at the expense of his country's welfare. Internal disruption is the thing least to be desired in the present controversy with Germany because the old adage that a house divided against itself can not stand still holds good.

Whether the prediction is true that Mr. Bryan is preparing himself to enter the presidential campaign on a prohibition and peace plan remains to be seen. If he becomes a candidate the assertion that he is an opportunist will be verified in the eyes of many. Mr. Bryan, although the sentiment in this country is overwhelmingly in favor of peace, will find that the people of the nation are willing to go a long distance to preserve the tranquility of the country, but that they will not sacrifice the nation's honor by turning the other cheek.

Increase in Foodstuffs.

The regular monthly statement of the foreign trade sent out from Washington finds that the net increase in our total exports has been wholly in foodstuffs and in that item of foodstuffs which covers those in crude condition and food animals.

This is further conclusive proof that the war in Europe which laid bare the workshops and recruited their workers for the armies is responsible for the balance of trade coming to this side. There was a big increase in exports for April, the last month on which figures have been compiled, and there is a steadily declining reduction of imports, all of which tends to prove the conclusion that the resources of Europe are gradually being reduced by the war and the great countries which are at each others necks are less and less of producers every month.

The monthly statement contends that there has been an absolute increase in ten months of importations of foodstuffs partly or wholly manufactured. The larger part of the total shrinkage of total imports has been in the items of manufactures and particularly in that of manufactures ready for consumption. The increase in exports for April arises from the exportation of horses in that month to the value of $7,088,811 and of mules to the value of $2,334,744, all for war purposes.

Wheat Yield About Same.

The United States bureau of crop estimates forecasts June 1 the probable wheat yield in Indiana will be 43,200,000 bushels, and in the United States 949,000,000 as against a yield of 43,239,000 bushels in Indiana, and 891,017,000 in the United States in 1914. This plainly indicates that there is going to be very little difference between the production of wheat generally in the United States this year and last. The opinion was advanced by many when the European war broke out last August that the wheat acreage would be immensely increased because of the prospect of the United States having to feed the people of Europe. If this was general enough, there certainly is a reduction in the yield per acre. On the other hand, there were many farmers who did not appreciate what the future held in store when war for an indefinite period became a fixed certainty.

When the trees in the court house yard get large enough to afford any shade, there undoubtedly could not be any objection if benches were placed on the lawn and people were allowed some recreation there. It appears that the lawn about the court house is a spot that has not been utilized to its fullest extent.

Sleep Without Drugs.

"Doc, how can I get to sleep without using dope?" asked a man troubled with insomnia of a noted physician.

"On going to bed assume a comfortable attitude in which every muscle is relaxed," said the doctor, "but not the attitude in which you are accustomed to go to sleep, though something resembling it. Every movement, even coughing and yawning, must be strictly repressed, especially the desire to turn over. Maintain the same attitude without change, constantly resisting the longing to move or turn over. As a rule, by the end of fifteen or twenty minutes of this you will find yourself growing very drowsy and then, just as the desire to roll over becomes absolutely uncontrollable turn with the least possible effort and assume the position in which you habitually go to sleep. Natural sleep should follow at once. This method seldom fails. Give it a thorough trial at least before resorting to a drug to bring sleep."—Buffalo Express.

Heated Bearings.

Sometimes when a bearing becomes heated and requires oil it will be found that the oil will not flow down in the oil hole. Either the hole is clogged with dirt or the heat may cause the air to rise and prevent the oil from entering. Where a wire cannot be used effectively the following remedy, although it is not infallible, is almost sure to make the oil reach the bearing.

Fill the hole with oil and quickly place the thumb over it to prevent the air from escaping, and if the oil cup does not leak the heated air inside will rise above the oil, and in two or three minutes it will be forced into the bearing, even if it has to pass considerable dirt.

When a bearing cannot be reached in this way and when light oils, such as kerosene, are ineffective, try placing a little mercury in the oil hole and allow it to remain a few minutes, then use oil.—World's Advance.

After All His Trouble.

Two men were hurrying along Park row when the wind seemed to be blowing from all directions to the peril of umbrellas and anything not firmly anchored. One of them noticed the handle of a wrecked umbrella which had been thrown into the street along with many others and, stopping to pick it up, remarked to his companion that it was too good to pass. As he stooped a gust of wind captured his hat, and it went spinning along toward St. Paul's chapel, he after it. He ran into a man, slipped, fell in the mud and arose in time to see his hat run over by a truck. At a nearby restaurant, where he was drying his clothes, he said: "I lost a five dollar hat and spoiled a suit of clothes for the handle of a thirty cent umbrella. That would not be so bad, but I see the handle is broken."—New York Tribune.

A Painting.

What is a painting? It is the language of the artist in which he expresses his thought, conception of a mind or emotion of heart. Where a writer expresses himself in words, the artist expresses himself in colors, light and shadows. An author's description of a place, person or object is but a word picture, while the artist's canvas stares us in the face, so to speak, flashing the subject continually before our eyes until we can grasp its every meaning without so much as turning a page. Thanks to our own Gilbert Stuart and his wonderful conception of the portrait of George Washington, it would take a paragraph or more to describe George Washington's mouth or nose, where Gilbert Stuart tells it to us in a few strokes of his masterful brush.—Elmer A. Haaseman in National Magazine.

Ideal Politics.

What I wish first to insist upon is the essential worth, nobility, primary indeed, of the liberal pursuit of politics. It is simply the highest, the most dignified, the most important of all earthly objects of human study. Next to the relations of man with his maker there is nothing so deserving his best attention as his relation to his fellow men. The welfare of the community is always more important than the welfare of any individual or number of individuals, and the welfare of the community is the highest object of the study of politics.—Whitelaw Reid.

Two Master Writers.

It was an odd coincidence, but a striking one, that the greatest genius of England and the most masterful mind in Spain passed from earth on the same day. Shakespeare and Cervantes both died April 23, 1616, the former being only fifty-two years old, and the latter sixty-nine.

The Ladder.

"Yes, he's one of our leading citizens. He certainly has climbed high in a few years. Why, he holds our best federal job."

"Indeed! How did he get it?"

"His brother-in-law is our leading politician."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fine Distinction.

"There are some things about life that I don't understand."

"What now?"

"A man is looked up to if he moves in a circle and frowned down on if he belongs to a ring."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Extinguished.

"He was positively burning with love for her."

"Oh, it was all right. Her father put him out."

It is an everlasting duty, the duty of being brave. Valor is still value.

SERVICE

Of the three essentials—strength, organization and service—afforded to clients of this Bank, SERVICE is not the least important.

The Bank's entire organization is permeated with the spirit of service. It is not enough to accept and safeguard the banking and trust business of clients; every effort is put forth to be of additional active service, within the Bank's proper sphere.

For example, the Bank, if appointed custodian of securities, will as agent sign ownership certificates required by the Federal Income Tax Law, collect dividends and coupons promptly as they mature, and either credit or remit the proceeds to the client; and will promptly notify him should any "rights" or other subscription privileges attach to the securities held.

Another example, clients are welcome to the Bank's facilities for investment and for investigating and analyzing the value of securities.

Many other examples of special service to clients might be mentioned, all of which would help to explain the rapid and substantial growth of this Bank's business.

HUNDRED MILE AUTO RACE TODAY

Some of World's Fastest Drivers Entered in Speed Event Staged at Galesburg, Ill.

RALPH DEPALMA WILL DRIVE

Winner of Indianapolis Race Will Not Use Same Car, However, Because it is Disabled

BY MAURICE E. SHUNICK, JR.
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Thousands of speed fans from all parts of the Middle West arrived in Galesburg during the night to be on hand for the 100 mile auto race here today.

Some of the world's fastest drivers were entered in the classic run today. The race is being run at the Galesburg mile track, acknowledged to be the fastest and only dead level racing course in the world.

It was anticipated that old records would be broken. Last year Ralph Mulford set a new world's record for a dirt track and the course was not in the best of shape owing to previous rains. Mulford won the one hundred mile race in a spectacular finish, after Bob Burman ran out of gasoline. Burman led nearly 99½ miles.

The following week at Minneapolis, Minn., the world's records established here were beaten.

Tom Alley and Eddie O'Donnell, driving Duesenberg cars were picked by hundreds of speed fans to win the race. This was due to the fact that they both made such a fine showing in the Indianapolis race on Decoration Day. Chandler, driving the third Duesenberg car was expected to figure in the money.

Andy Burt was believed by some to be a "dark horse" and might spring up and take away the honors. Cooper, Brown Ostewig, and Mc Lester was confident of making a fine showing. They declared their cars to be in shape and well able to withstand the test.

McLester has been in Galesburg for the past two weeks and has hit a fast clip on a number of trial starts. He said the track was good for eight miles per hour. All the cars were in Galesburg last Saturday.

Ralph DePalma will drive his Mercedes Six. It was hoped that the winner of the Indianapolis race would be able to use the Mercedes Four, but this was impossible because of the fact that the car was badly disabled in the Indianapolis race, and is now undergoing repairs preparatory for the Chicago race, on June 19. John DePalma is driving a De Lage. Both were favorites of hundreds of fans, and they were expected to carry off some of the prize money.

John G. DeLong, who had charge of the Indianapolis race officiated as starter.

In addition to a number of prominent officials in the racing game are in attendance. F. E. Edwards of Chicago, who is general manager of the Chicago speedway, acted as referee. L. A. Hillman, official scorer of the Elgin and Chicago races, had charge of the scoring here. Charles Erbstein, a prominent attorney of Chicago, served as one of the judges. Fred Jenck of the Elgin course, also acted in an official capacity.

Hon. William Hale Thompson, Mayor of Chicago acted as Honorary Referee.

David Beercoff of New York, a member of the National Committee of the A. A. A. and R. H. Kennerdell of New York, Chairman of the Contest Board of the A. A. A. and Clifford Ireland, of Peoria, Illinois representative of the A. A. A. were among those in attendance. Chicagoans, fond of speed "merchants" who occupied seats in the grand stand were George F. Ballon, Jos. E. Callender, E. A. Turner, J. W. Maguire, S. E. Hibbens, Harry A. Tarantous, Darwin S. Hatch and David G. Joyce. They are all connected with the Chicago Automobile club.

MAY REGULATE FISTIC GAME

Promoters Take Kindly to Suggestion That National Governing Body be Formed

TOM ANDREWS BACKS MOVE

Uniform Rules Would be in Effect And Weights of Classes Would be Determined

BY BARRY FARIS
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

New York, June 9.—New York's boxing promoters—at least the progressive ones—are seriously considering the suggestion recently made that a national governing body be selected to control the fistic game. Plans are under way for a meeting to be held here next fall at which the organization of such a body will be perfected. Representatives from every state in which boxing is regulated by state laws are expected to attend.

Thomas S. Andrews, boxing writer and promoter of Milwaukee, Wis., is responsible for the suggestion. Andrews has been associated with the fight game for several years and has done much to elevate it to a higher plane. He believes that with a national governing body that would regulate the game, boxing would be permitted in many more states than it is now.

One thing the commission would settle first would be a scale of weights for the different championships. At present, weights for the different titles are shifted up and down to suit the pleasure of whoever happens to hold the championship at the time. Under a national commission this would be done away with. The lightweight championship, for instance, would have to be decided at 133 pounds. Recently it has been set at 135 pounds.

Uniform rules to govern boxing all over the country would be adopted also. At present various kinds of rules govern the game. In many western states boxers are permitted to hit in the breakaways. In New York and several other states where boxing is regulated by the laws the boxers have to "break clean." They are not allowed to hit when stepping out of a clinch.

A national body could also govern championships. No fighter would be permitted to hold a championship indefinitely without defending it. At present a champion can hold his title forever without risking it in a bout to a decision if he cares to do so.

Avaricious managers have also been a thorn in promoters' sides for a long time. A national governing body could in a large measure do away with this evil. Exorbitant demands by boxers could be regulated.

ARE BRUSHING UP THEIR EQUIPMENT

Devotees of Isaac Walton Prepare For Good Fishing Season on The Indiana Lakes

LAWS HERE ARE LENIENT

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Ind., June 9.—Now that June the favorite fishing month is here the devotees of Isaac Walton are brushing up their equipment for a spin to Indiana lakes. This state is one of the most lenient states regarding fishing. There are no closed seasons except on parts of certain lakes which have been given over to spawning.

Ten thousand signs bearing the words "INDIANA STATE FISHING PRESERVE" and on which are instructions not to fish in that particular sport between March 20 and July 1 have been placed in parts of the lakes and streams of the state. But on other parts of lakes and streams one is permitted to catch fish at any time of the year.

There have been few changes in the fishing laws since two years ago. As usual rock bass under six inches must be thrown back into the water and black bass under ten inches must not be kept. Pike or pickerel under twelve inches are illegal and carry less than six inches must be thrown back into the waters.

The limit of twelve bass to one man is still in force. Two men fishing from the same boat are limited to twenty bass. Fifty crappies or blue gills is the limit for one day's catch.

VEGETABLE CALOMEL

Vegetable calomel, extract of the root of the old-fashioned may-apple plant, does not salivate. As a liver stimulant, it's great. It's a perfect substitute for ordinary calomel (mercury); in fact, it's better, because its action is gentle instead of severe and irritating—and it leaves no mean, disagreeable after-effects. Physicians recognize this and prescribe may-apple root (podophyllin, they call it) daily.

Combined with four other standard, all-vegetable remedies, may-apple root may now be had at most any druggist's in convenient sugar-coated tablet form by asking for Santanel Laxatives. If you forget the name, ask for the box that has the picture of the soldier on it.

These tablets are small, easy to take and are really wonderful little performers.

They quickly clean out the poisons that are causing you headache, constipation, sour stomach, biliousness, dizzy spells, bad breath and coated tongue.

They are mild. They never gripe. And they are a bowel tonic as well as a cleanser and liver regulator. A 10c box should last one several weeks. A Physician's trial package (4 doses) will be mailed you free if you write mentioning this advertisement. The Santanel Remedies Co., 802 Madison Ave., Covington, Ky.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

"Why Lenora didn't come on to you here I can't imagine," he said. "However, I'll go back to the hotel where she was to spend the night after she arrived. She may have gone back there. That's my address, Mrs. Willet. If you hear anything I wish you'd let me know. Lenora's quite a particular friend of mine and I am a little anxious."

Quest had already opened the front door for himself and passed out. He sprang into the taxi, which he had kept waiting.

"Clifford's hotel in Payne street," he told the man.

He lit a cigar and smoked furiously all the way, throwing it on to the pavement as he hurried into the quiet private hotel which a fellow passenger on the steamer had recommended as being suitable for Lenora's one night alone in town.

"Can you tell me if Miss Lenora Macdougall is staying here?" he asked at the office.

The woman shook her head.

"Miss Macdougall stayed here the night before last," she said, "and her luggage is waiting for orders. She left here yesterday afternoon to go to her aunt's, and promised to send for her things later on during the day. There they stand, all ready for her."

"What time did she go?"

"Directly after an early lunch. It must have been about two o'clock."

Quest hurried away. So after all there was some foundation for this queer sense of depression which had been hovering about him for the last few days!

"Scotland Yard," he told the taxi driver.

He thrust another cigar between his teeth, but forgot to light it. He was amazed at his own sensations, conscious of fears and emotions of which he would never have believed himself capable. He gave in his card, and after a few moments' delay he was shown into the presence of one of the chiefs of the detective department, who greeted him warmly.

"My name is Hardaway," the latter announced.

"My assistant, a young lady, Miss Lenora Macdougall, has disappeared! She and I and Professor Ashleigh left the steamer at Plymouth and traveled up in the boat train. It was stopped at Hamblin road for the professor and myself, and Miss Macdougall came on to London. She was staying at Clifford's hotel in Payne street for the night, and then going on to the aunt. Well, I've found that aunt. She was expecting the girl, but the girl never appeared."

"Where did this aunt live?" Hardaway inquired.

"No. 17, Princess Court road, West Kensington," Quest replied. "She had just moved there from Elmsmere road, Hampstead. I went first to Hampstead. Lenora had been there and learned her aunt's correct address in West Kensington. I followed on to West Kensington and found that the aunt was still awaiting her."

A new interest seemed suddenly to have crept into Hardaway's manner.

"Let me see," he said, "if she left Clifford's hotel about two, she would have been at Hampstead about half-past two. She would waste a few minutes in making inquiries, then she probably left Hampstead for West Kensington, say, at a quarter to three. Give me at once a description of the young lady," he demanded.

Quest drew a photograph from his pocket and passed it silently over.

"Mr. Quest," he said, "it is just possible that your visit here has been an exceedingly opportune one."

"Come along with me," he continued. "We'll talk as we go."

They entered a taxi and drove off westwards.

"Mr. Quest," he went on, "for two months we have been on the track of a man and a woman whom we strongly suspect of having decoyed half a dozen perfectly respectable young women, and shipped them out to South America."

"The white slave traffic!" Quest gasped.

"Something of the sort," Hardaway admitted. "Well, we've been closing the net around this interesting couple, and last night I had information brought to me upon which we are acting this afternoon. We've had them watched and it seems that they were sitting in a tea place about three o'clock yesterday afternoon when a young woman entered who was obviously a stranger to London. You see, the time fits in exactly, if your assistant decided to stop on her way to Kensington and get some tea. She asked the woman at the desk the best means of getting to West Kensington without taking a taxicab. Her description tallies exactly with the photograph you have shown me. The woman whom my men were watching addressed her and offered to show her the way. They left the place together. My men followed them. The house has been watched ever since and we are raiding it this afternoon. You and I will just be in time."

He stopped the cab and they got out. A man who seemed to be strolling aimlessly along reading a newspaper suddenly joined them.

"Well, Dixon?" his chief exclaimed.

The man glanced around.

"I've got three men round at the back, Mr. Hardaway," he said. "It's impossible for anyone to leave the place."

Hardaway paused to consider a moment.

"Look here," Quest suggested, "they know all of you, of course, and they'll never let you in until they're forced to. I'm a stranger. Let me go. I'll get in all right."

"All right," he assented. "We shall follow you up pretty closely, though."

Quest stepped back into the taxi and gave the driver a direction. When he emerged in front of the handsome gray stone house he seemed to have become completely transformed. There was a fatuous smile upon his lips. He crossed the pavement with difficulty, stumbling up the steps, and held on to the knocker with one hand while he consulted a slip of paper. He had scarcely rung the bell before a slightly parted curtain in the front room fell together and a moment later the door was opened by a man in the livery of a butler, but with the face and physique of a prize-fighter.

"Lady of the house," Quest demanded. "Want to see the lady of the house?"

Almost immediately he was conscious of a woman standing in the hall before him.

"You had better come in," she invited. "Please do not stand in the doorway."

Quest, however, who had heard the footsteps of the others behind him, loitered there for a moment.

"You're the lady whose name is on this piece of paper?" he demanded.

"This place is all right, eh?"

"I really do not know what you mean," the woman replied coldly; "but if you will come inside I will talk with you in the drawing room."

Quest, as though stumbling against the front door, had it now wide open, and in a moment the hall seemed full. The woman shrieked. The butler suddenly sprang upon the last man to enter and sent him spinning down the steps. Almost at that instant there was a scream from upstairs. Quest took a running jump and went up the stairs four at a time. The butler, who had so far defied arrest, suddenly snatched the revolver from Hardaway's hand and fired blindly in front of him, missing Quest only by an inch or two.

"Don't be a fool, Karl!" the woman called out. "The game's up. Take it quietly."

Once more the shriek rang through the house. Quest rushed to the door of the room from whence it came, tried the handle, and found it locked. He ran back a little way and charged it. From inside he could hear a turmoil of voices. White with rage and passion, he pushed and kicked madly. There was a shot from inside, a bullet came through the door within an inch of his head, then the crash of broken crockery and a man's groan. With a final effort Quest dashed the door in and staggered into the room. Lenora was standing in the far corner, the front of her dress torn and blood upon her lips. She held a revolver in her hand, and was covering a man whose head and hands were bleeding. Around him were the debris of a broken jug.

"Mr. Quest!" she screamed. "Don't go near him—I've got him covered. I'm all right."

Quest drew a long breath. The man who stood glaring at him was well dressed and still young. He was unarmed, however, and Quest secured him in a moment.

"The girl's mad!" he said sullenly.

"No one wanted to do her any harm. Hardaway and his men came trooping up the stairs. Quest relinquished his prisoner and went over to Lenora.

"I've been so frightened," she sobbed. "They got me in here—they told me that this was the street in which my aunt lived—and they wouldn't let me go. The woman was horrible. And this afternoon this man came. The brute!"

Quest turned to Hardaway.

"I'll take the young lady away," he said. "You know where to find us."

Lenora had almost recovered when they reached the hotel. Walking up and down they found the professor.

"My friend!" he exclaimed—"Mr. Quest! It is the devil incarnate against whom we fight!"

"What do you mean?" Quest demanded.

The professor wrung his hands. "I put him in our James II prison," he declared. "Why should I think of the secret passage? No one has used it for a hundred years. He found it, learned the trick—" "You mean," Quest cried—"He has escaped!" the professor broke in. "Craig has escaped again! They are searching for him high and

Craig Escapes From the Cellar.

low, but he has gone!"

Quest's arm tightened for a moment in Lenora's. It was curious how he seemed to have lost at that moment all sense of proportion. Lenora was safe . . . the relief of that one thought overshadowed everything else in the world.

"The fellow can't get far," he muttered.

"Who knows?" the professor replied, dolefully.

They had been standing together in a little recess of the hall. Suddenly Lenora, whose face was turned toward the entrance doors, gave a little cry. She took a quick step forward.

"Laura!" she exclaimed, wonderingly. "Why, it's Laura!"

They all turned around. A young woman had just entered the hotel, followed by a porter carrying some luggage. Her arm was in a sling and there was a bandage around her forehead. She walked, too, with the help of a stick. She recognized them at once and waved it gayly.

"Hullo, you people!" she cried. "Soon run you to earth, eh?"

They were for a moment dumfounded. Lenora was the first to find words. "But when did you start, Laura?" she asked. "I thought you were too ill to move for weeks."

The girl smiled contemptuously.

"I left three days after you, on the Kaiser Frederic," she replied. "There was some trouble at Plymouth, and we came into Southampton early this morning, and here I am. Say, before we go any further, tell me about Craig."

"We've had him," Quest confessed. "and lost him again. He escaped last night."

"Where from?" Laura asked.

"Hamblin house."

"Say, is that anywhere near the south coast?" the girl demanded excitedly.

"It's not far away," Quest replied, quickly. "Why?"

"I'll tell you why," Laura explained.

"I'll Give a Ten-Pound Note to Anyone Who Gets Me Out to the Barton Before She Sails."

"I was as sure or it as anyone could be. Craig passed me in Southampton water this morning, being rowed out to a steamer. Not only that, but he recognized me. I saw him draw back and hide his face, but somehow I couldn't believe that it was really he. I was just coming down the gangway and I nearly fell into the sea, I was so surprised."

Quest was already turning over the pages of the timetable.

"What was the steamer?" he demanded.

"I found out," Laura told him. "I tell you, I was so sure of it's being Craig that I made no end of inquiries. It was the Barton, bound for India, first stop Port Said."

"When does she sail?" Quest asked.

"Tonight—somewhere about seven," Laura replied.

Quest glanced at the clock and threw down the timetable. He turned toward the door. They all followed him.

"I'm for Southampton," he announced. "I'm going to try to get on board that steamer before she sails. Lenora, you'd better go upstairs and lie down. They'll give you a room here. Don't you stir out till I come back. Professor, what about you?"

"I shall accompany you," the professor declared.

"And nothing," Lenora declared, firmly, as she caught at Quest's arm, "would keep me away."

"I'll telephone to Scotland Yard, in case they care to send a man down," Quest decided.

They caught a train to Southampton, where they were joined by a man from Scotland Yard. The little party drove as quickly as possible to the docks.

"Where does the Barton start from?" Quest asked the piermaster.

The man pointed out a little way down the water.

"She's not in dock, sir," he said.

"She's lying out yonder. You'll barely catch her, I'm afraid," he added, glancing at the clock.

They hurried to the edge of the quay.

"Look here," Quest cried, raising his voice, "I'll give a ten-pound note to anyone who gets me out to the Barton before she sails."

The little party were almost thrown into a tug, and in a few minutes they were skimming across the smooth water. Just as they reached the steamer, however, she began to move.

"Run up alongside," Quest ordered.

The captain came down from the bridge, where he had been conferring with the pilot.

"Keep away from the side there," he shouted. "Who are you?"

"We are in search of a desperate criminal whom we believe to be on board your steamer," Quest explained. "Please take us on board."

The captain shook his head.

"Are you from Scotland Yard?" he asked. "Have you got your warrant?"

"We are from America," Quest answered, "but we've got a Scotland Yard man with us and a warrant, right enough."

The captain shook his head.

"I am over an hour late," he said.

"The two men walked down the deck together. They found the captain alone in his room, with a chart spread out in front of him and a pair of compasses in his hand. He turned round and greeted them.

"Well?"

"No luck, sir," Quest announced. "Your steward has given us every assistance possible, and we have searched the ship thoroughly. Unless he has found a hiding place unknown to your steward, and not apparent to us, the man is not on board."

The captain frowned slightly.

"You are not suggesting that this is possible, I suppose?"

"Quest did not at once reply. He was thinking of Laura's obstinacy."

"Personally," he admitted, "I should not have believed it possible. The young lady of our party, however, who declares that she saw Craig board the steamer, is quite immovable."

"Brown," said the captain, turning to the steward, "I understand that you say that you have taken these gentlemen into every corner of the ship, that you have ransacked every possible hiding place, that you have given them every possible opportunity of searching for themselves?"

"That is quite true, sir," the man acknowledged.

"You agree with me that it is impossible for anyone to remain hidden in this ship?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"You hear, gentlemen?" the captain continued. "I really can do no more. What the mischief are you hanging about for, Brown?" he asked, turning to the steward, who was standing by with a carpet-sweeper in his hand.

"Room wants cleaning out badly, sir."

The captain glanced distastefully at the carpet-sweeper.

"Do it when I am at dinner, then," he ordered, "and take that damned thing away."

The steward obeyed promptly. Quest and Harris followed him down the deck.

"Queer-looking fellow, that," the latter remarked. "Doesn't seem quite at his ease, does he?"

"Seemed a trifle overanxious, I thought, when he was showing us round the ship," Quest agreed.

"Mem," Harris murmured, softly, "as the gentleman who wrote the volume of detective stories I am reading puts it, to keep our eye on Brown."

The captain, who was down to dinner unusually early, rose to welcome

"As a Pleasure Cruise," Quest Remarked, "This Excursion Seems to Be a Success."

CHAPTER XXII.

THE SHIP OF HORROR.

Quest leaned a little forward and gazed down the line of steamer chairs. The professor, in a borrowed overcoat and cap, was reclining at full length, studying a book on seagulls which he had found in the library. Laura and Lenora were both dozing tranquilly. Mr. Harris of Scotland Yard was deep in a volume of detective stories.

"As a pleasure cruise," Quest remarked grimly, "this little excursion seems to be a complete success."

Laura opened her eyes at once.

"Trying to get my goat again, eh?" she retorted. "I suppose that's what you're after. Going to tell me, I suppose, that it wasn't Craig I saw aboard this steamer?"

"We are all liable to make mistakes," Quest observed, "and I am inclined to believe that this is one of yours."

Laura's expression was a little dogged.

"If he's too clever for you and Mr. Harris," she said, "I can't help that. I only know that he came on board. My eyes are the one thing in life I do believe."

"If you'll excuse me saying so, Miss Laura," Harris ventured, leaning deferentially towards her, "there isn't a passenger on board this ship, or a servant, or one of the crew, whom we haven't seen. We've been into every stateroom, and we've even searched the hold. We've been over the ship, backwards and forwards. The captain's own steward has been our guide, and we've conducted an extra search on our own account. Personally, I must say I have come to the same conclusion as Mr. Quest. At the present moment there is no such person as the man we are looking for on board this steamer."

"Then he either changed into another one," Laura declared obstinately, "or else he jumped overboard."

"Come on, Harris, you and I promised to report to the captain this morning. I don't suppose he'll be any too pleased with us. Let's get through with it."

The two men walked down the deck together. They found the captain alone in his room, with a chart spread out in front of him and a pair of compasses in his hand. He turned round and greeted them.

"Well?"

"No luck, sir," Quest announced. "Your steward has given us every assistance possible, and we have searched the ship thoroughly. Unless he has found a hiding place unknown to your steward, and not apparent to us, the man is not on board."

"That is quite true, sir," the man acknowledged.

"You agree with me that it is impossible for anyone to remain hidden in this ship?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"You hear, gentlemen?" the captain continued. "I really can do no more. What the mischief are you hanging about for, Brown?" he asked, turning to the steward, who was standing by with a carpet-sweeper in his hand.

"Room wants cleaning out badly, sir."

The captain glanced distastefully at the carpet-sweeper.

"Do it when I am at dinner, then," he ordered, "and take that damned thing away."

The steward obeyed promptly. Quest and Harris followed him down the deck.

"Queer-looking fellow, that," the latter remarked. "Doesn't seem quite at his ease, does he?"

"Seemed a trifle overanxious, I thought, when he was showing us round the ship," Quest agreed.

"Mem," Harris murmured, softly, "as the gentleman who wrote the volume of detective stories I am reading puts it, to keep our eye on Brown."

The captain, who was down to dinner unusually early, rose to welcome

Quest's little party, and himself arranged the seats.

They settled down into the places arranged for them.

An elderly lady, dressed in somewhat oppressive black, with a big cameo brooch at her throat and a black satin bag in her hand, was being shown by the steward to a seat by Quest's side. She acknowledged the captain's greeting acidly.

"Good evening, captain," she said. "I understood from the second steward that the seat on your right hand would be reserved for me. I am Mrs. Foston Rowe."

The captain received the announcement calmly.

"Very pleased to have you at the table, madam," he replied. "As to the seating, I leave that entirely to the steward. I never interfere myself."

Laura pinched his arm, and Lenora glanced away to hide a smile. Mrs. Foston Rowe studied the menu disapprovingly.

"Hors d'oeuvres," she declared, "I never touch. No one knows how long they've been opened. Bouillon—I will have some bouillon, steward."

"In one moment, madam."

The professor came ambling along towards the table.

"I fear that I am a few moments late," he remarked, as he took the chair next to Mrs. Foston Rowe. I offer you my apologies, captain. I congratulate you upon your library. I have discovered a most interesting book upon the habits of seagulls. It kept me engrossed until the very last moment, and I am hungry."

"Well, you'll have to stay hungry a long time at this table then," Mrs. Foston Rowe snapped. "Seems to me that the service is going to be abominable."

The steward, who had just arrived, presented a cup of bouillon to Quest. The others had all been served. Quest stirred it thoughtfully.

"And as to the custom," Mrs. Foston Rowe continued, "of serving gentlemen before ladies, it is, I suppose, peculiar to this steamer."

Quest hastily laid down his spoon, raised the cup of bouillon and presented it with a little bow to his neighbor.

"Pray allow me, madam," he begged. "The steward was to blame."

Mrs. Foston Rowe did not hesitate for a moment. She broke up some toast in the bouillon and commenced to sip it.

The spoon suddenly went clattering from her fingers. She caught at the sides of the table, there was a strange look in her face. With scarcely a murmur she fell back in her seat. Quest leaned hurriedly forward.

There was a slight commotion. The doctor came hurrying up from the other side of the saloon. He bent over her and his face grew grave.

"What is it?" the captain demanded.

The doctor glanced at him meaningly.

"She had better be carried out," he whispered.

"Was it a faint?" Lenora asked.

"We shall know directly," the captain replied. "Better keep your places I think. Steward, serve the dinner as usual."

The man held out his hand to withdraw the cup of bouillon, but Quest drew it towards him.

"Let it wait for a moment," he ordered.

He glanced at the captain, who nodded back. In a few moments the doctor reappeared. He leaned down and whispered to the captain.

"Dead!"

Quest turned around.

Bohemians.
The term "Bohemian," applied to those who lead a certain style of life, originated in France, where it was first applied to the gypsies, who were erroneously supposed to be natives of Bohemia. At some time early in the nineteenth century the name came to be applied to persons of unsettled habits who did not observe the conventional rules of society. "Bohemia," the haunt of artists and students with little money, was in the Latin quarter of Paris and flourished, especially in the period of 1830. The classical description of it is contained in Henri Murger's "Scenes of the Life of Bohemia," which is published in several translations. Puccini's opera, "La Boheme," is founded on this famous book. As James Anthony Froude explains, the term Bohemian is not necessarily uncomplimentary. Speaking of Bohemians, he says, "I mean merely a class of persons who prefer adventure and speculation to settled industry and who do not work well in the harness of ordinary life."—Philadelphia Press.

Hard Times.
Ernest was very big and very black, and when it came to sleeping and eating fully justified his name. Ernest did not fancy steady work, but he was apt to be available when spring came for odd jobs at a dollar a day and his dinner. One spring he came in with a sheepish grin. "Miss Sally, I been hearin' in de lodge meetin' 'bout dese hard times, an' I 'low I better raise my salary to a dollar an' a quarter a day." "You're not worth that, Ernest, and you know it. Besides, I can't afford to pay more." Ernest scratched his head; this was a matter for more thought than he had anticipated. "I figgered out when dey wuz takin' 'bout dem hard times dat I couldn't 'ford to work for no less. But"—his black face gleamed with a sudden thought—"I won't eat so much."—New York Post.

Eastern Scrub Pine.
A Lazarus of the forest is the eastern scrub pine, also called Jersey pine, a small, puny tree of poor and pitiful form, willing to subsist on the "crumbs" that fall from the table of others. It grows in New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and farther south and west. It creeps into open spaces and is the companion of sassafras and huckleberry bushes. Old, worn out, gullied fields appeal to this pine, because little else will grow there, and it is not obliged to fight for room. In course of time, however, as the impoverished soil begins to recover broad leaf seedlings come in. As these increase in size the scrub pines die and finally disappear. Though they have been in full possession of the ground, they are unable to hold it against competitors.

The Bashful Lover.
The girl who has a bashful suitor should cease lamenting the inconveniences of the situation and thank Providence for him. He will be very, very faithful. No need for heartburnings, no cause for jealousies, will arise in this connection. For not only have the other girls no time for him (a fact which, taken alone, is hardly a recommendation to the average woman, by the way), but he himself—oh, joy of joys!—will have no time for the other girls. And so the maiden who has a very bashful lover should cease repining. Once she has secured that eminently suitable person, it is up to her to train him and educate him in the way he should go. And there is no fear that he will ever depart from her.—Ellen Adair in Philadelphia Ledger.

And That's the Reason.
"Don't you want your nice bread and butter, Anne?" asked her father. Anne shook her head. "It's a shame to waste such nice bread and butter," continued her father. "I'll eat it myself." Anne watched the process with big eyes and a look of expectancy on her face. Finally, when the last mouthful had disappeared, Anne asked, "Papa, did it tickle?" "Tickle!" said her father. "Why, no. What do you mean?" "I thought it would tickle," said Anne. "It had a long hair on it."—Delineator.

May Have Started Him.
"I wonder how Columbus got the idea that the world was round?" "I don't know that there is anything remarkable about his deductions. Any man along in middle age begins to get the idea that the world is not exactly square."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Perfume.
When you use perfume and call it such, do you think how the name came about? It means, in Latin, "from smoke," and the name proves that the first perfumes were only aromatic woods or gums that scented the air when burned.

Natural Result.
"What has become of your nephew?" "The one who was so fond of books?" "Yes." "Oh, he became a page in the legislature."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Languid Pets.
"These pampered dogs of the rich are rather listless, it seems to me." "Yes; you never see one of them burying a marshmallow or worrying a chocolate drop."—Judge.

LABOR PROBLEM CAUSES WORRY

Following War England Faces Hard Proposition According to Bruno Lasker, of New York

KNOWS WHEREOF HE SPEAKS

Declares There is no Chance For Total Prohibition in His Country Sentiment Lacking

BY LOWELL MELETT (U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, June 9.—"The dislocation of labor is the biggest problem England has on her hands next to a successful conclusion of the war, and even now the labor situation is receiving nearly as much attention from the newspapers and thoughtful public of England as the war."

This sentence is the summary of a long interview with Bruno Lasker of York, England, author of several works on labor problems, who is now in this country making a study of the questions of industrial efficiency and public works for S. Beecham Rowntree. Mr. Lasker is the confidential secretary of Mr. Rowntree and the latter is a very close personal friend and advisor of Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Lasker can speak with considerable certainty of the labor situation in England today and of the attitude and purposes of the Liberal Government with regard to the labor problem. Mr. Lasker and Mr. Rowntree were among economists and social reformers who recently won the distinction in England for their work on the Land Inquiry Commission of the Liberal Party. This commission has published the most extensive and scientific study of the questions of land tenancy, housing conditions and rural labor problems ever put forth.

As a result of the recommendations made by the commission the Government was engaged in drafting legislation which it was about to submit to Parliament when the war broke out, and which, Mr. Lasker said, will very likely be presented as soon as possible at the conclusion of the war. But while looking to those measures for substantial improvements, those gentlemen see the increased complication of the labor problem which will immediately be felt when the war is over and they are farsighted enough to begin now to study the question of what shall be done in England when peace has been declared.

"You must now be surprised if you see indications of what may seem to you a lack of patriotism among the British laboring men over this war," said Mr. Lasker. "They realize pretty thoroughly that the employing class is the only class that can possibly profit by the war and that the burdens of hardships are falling, and will continue to fall, on them. Peace propaganda has been carried on in England for many years and it was only last summer that the Labor Party conducted an educational campaign against armaments. Well some of this education has stuck, and the result is what is called the unpatriotic attitude of labor in England today."

Asked about the prohibition question in England Mr. Lasker said:

"There is not the slightest chance of compulsory total prohibition. There is nothing like the amount of prohibition sentiment at home that I find in your country and what is more to the point, the British workers certainly resent the idea of prohibition as being aimed directly against their freedom of action. They understand clearly enough that the well-to-do classes are not likely to be affected by any prohibition law and again they are made to realize that the burden of war falls most heavily on them."

"Although the question of temperance enters into the problem of industrial very largely, compulsory prohibition as a solution is impossible. The only thing to do in that direction is to create enough sentiment to make possible the enforcement of prohibition, or at least temperance, before any sweeping liquor statute is passed.

"But apparently the public and the press of your country does not grasp the fact that there is an actual dearth of labor in England today I have reports from all sections of England telling of the insufficiency of labor. The war is rapidly draining labor, and especially skilled labor, from the country. Why things have come to such a pass that the big manufacturers are going about trying to bribe workmen away from the plants of small concerns. Rather than drunkenness, the scarcity of war materials, and of all other supplies, for that matter is due to the fact that England today is forced to run her plants with unskilled labor and not enough of that. Now of course, it is impossible to keep up normal production on that basis, much less talk of increasing the output of goods. And every recruit added to the army makes the situation worse."

"But there is one way in which the employers of England have benefited temporarily by the war. There were indications that had this war not started there would have been a gigantic strike of all transport workers that would have tied up the whole country. That, for the time being, has been avoided but when the war is over things may come to a crisis."

CASEY PROMISES TO OBEY PAROLE

Convicted "Blind Tiger" Operator is Set Free Today When Taken Before Judge Sparks.

PROVISIONS ARE READ TO HIM

Newton Casey, convicted "blind tiger" operator, was released from the Rush county jail this afternoon on the parole issued by Governor Ralston. Casey appeared before Judge Sparks and the parole was read to him. The provisions which stated that the parole should be in effect as long as Casey remained away from places where liquors were sold and not again to engage in the sale of liquor were pointed out to him.

The question of the number of days, as pointed out by the governor, was cleared when it was shown that the associating charge came first and both fines had been taken into consideration. The amount of the fine remitted to Casey was $380, $90 on the associating charge and $290 on the "blind tiger" charge. Casey was highly elated to gain his freedom and promised the court that he would obey the provisions of the parole.

MUCH TRIED CASE STILL WITH A JURY

Maple-Johnson Suit, Over Which There Has Been Disagreement, is Not Decided Yet.

MULL CASE TO GO ELSEWHERE

GAVE MAPLE A DOLLAR.

The jury returned a verdict late this afternoon giving Maple one dollar damages and assessing the costs against Johnson.

The jury hearing the case of Clell Maple against Lafayette Johnson, on an account in which $45 was demanded, got the case this morning about eleven o'clock. At a late hour this afternoon the jury was still out and there was apparently a chance that it might disagree. The first time the case was tried the jury failed to agree.

A change of venue was asked this morning in the case of Eleanore B. Hall against George, Thomas and Leonidas Mull and Lotta Lee Lockwood to set aside a mortgage. The affidavit for a change of venue was filed by Mrs. Hall, who alleges she could not get a fair trial here. It has not yet been agreed as to what county will get the case.

The Russians are preparing to evacuate Lemburg according to unofficial dispatches reaching here today.

LONDON PAPERS SEE WAR AHEAD

Interpret Bryan's Resignation as Meaning That Conflict With Germany May Result

RECOGNIZED AS IMPORTANT

(By United Press.) London, June 9.—London newspapers interpreted the resignation of Secretary Bryan as an indication that President Wilson's rejoinder to Germany is so firmly phrased that war between United States and Germany may result.

The news that Bryan had left the cabinet was recognized as of great importance. The regular editions of papers had gone to press when the news was flashed.

"Secretary Bryan's resignation deals the last blow to the legend that President Wilson lacks nerve," said the Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial this afternoon.

"Mr. Wilson has given conclusive proof that his prolonged restraint was not timidity but the moderation of strength."

BRYAN STATES WHY HE DISAGREED WITH WILSON OVER GERMAN NOTE

SHOULD BE BOUND BY OTHER TREATIES

Resigned Secretary of State Declares Frank Statement Should be Made to Germany

TWO POINTS OF DIFFERENCE

Are Suggestion of Investigation And Warning be Given Americans Concerning Travel

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—Secretary Bryan issued the following statement this afternoon:

"My reason for resigning is clearly stated in my letter of resignation, namely, that I may employ as a private citizen the means which the president does not feel at liberty to employ. I honor him for doing what he believes to be right, and I am sure that he desires as I do to find a peaceful solution to the problem which has been created by the action of the submarines.

"Two of the points on which we differ, each conscientious in conviction, are first, as to the suggestion of investigation by an international commission, and second, as to warning Americans against traveling on belligerent vessels or with cargoes of American ammunition. I believe this nation should frankly state to Germany that we are willing to apply in this case the principle to which we are bound by treaties to apply to disputes between the United States and the thirty countries with which we have made treaties providing for the investigation of all disputes of every character and nature.

"Those treaty negotiations under this administration make war practically impossible between this government and those thirty governments.

"No treaty was entered into with Germany but I cannot see why that should stand in the way when both nations indorse the principle."

FUSION CABINET NOT CONSIDERED

"Plenty Good Democratic Material," Says White House Statement Denying Rumor.

DANIELS WILL NOT RESIGN

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—It was denied at the White house today with much emphasis that the administration had any thought as was reported of a coalition cabinet.

There is no necessity for one it was stated, and "whenever there are places to fill, there is plenty of good Democratic material."

A strong denial that any member of the cabinet was about to follow Secretary Bryan into retirement was given out from the white house today.

A rumor that Secretary Daniels had already resigned was answered by Daniels himself who personally announced that "all nine members of the cabinet are behind the president."

NOT TO SURRENDER AMERICAN RIGHTS

President Wilson Today Stands Firm on Policy of American Protection to its Citizens.

NO MATTER WHAT COST MAY BE

Secretary Bryan's Resignation Has Solidified the Cabinet, it is Asserted.

BULLETIN.

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—Transmission of the German note to Berlin began just before two o'clock this afternoon. It was between 2,100 and 2,200 words long split into four sections.

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—Facing the greatest crisis in recent American history President Woodrow Wilson stood firm today on the policy of no surrender of American rights. He was prepared to emphasize the rights of American protection to American citizens wherever they may go no matter what the cost. Secretary Bryan's resignation has solidified the cabinet.

Counselor Lansing, who will become the acting secretary of state, announced after a conference with the president that the German note will be coded and dispatched some time before night. He said it would be made public some time Friday morning.

James Bassett Moore, who resigned as counselor of the state department, owing to the difference of opinion with Secretary Bryan, called on the president today. It was rumored that he would become counselor under Lansing.

Secretary Bryan this morning before leaving for his home said, "My statement will be ready as soon as I cease to be secretary of state." The statement will not come before night as he ceases to be secretary when the note is dispatched.

Lansing announced that Assistant Solicitor Anderson will act temporarily as counselor. Lansing did not seem to think that a new secretary of state would be named at once.

President Wilson left for an automobile ride at 10:50 a. m. today. He was accompanied only by the chauffeur and a secret service man. As the machine turned into the avenue a party of 50 out-of-town visitors recognized him and cheered. The president responded by lifting his hat.

ARE DIVIDED IN THEIR OPINIONS

Some Local Democrats Censure Bryan and for Resigning and Others Believe it Will not be Damaging.

IS GENERALLY REGRETTED

Former Lieut. Governor Declares Premier's Withdrawal Will not Embarrass Wilson.

Leading Democrats here were divided in their opinion of William Bryan's resignation as secretary of state. Some were disposed to criticize "The Commoner" for his hasty action, in the belief that his resignation would embarrass the Wilson administration. Others looked upon it philosophically and declared that Bryan's withdrawal from the cabinet would not make the international situation any more critical.

Frank J. Hall, former lieutenant governor of Indiana, expressed the belief that Bryan's resignation would not change the policy of President Wilson in regard to his negotiations with Germany in the least. He also took the optimistic view that the administration would feel no ill effects from the upheaval in the cabinet. He said he thought the president was conducting the negotiations with great success and that he would adjust the differences between the United States and Germany satisfactorily.

"I deeply regret that differences have arisen between the high officials of the government at this period," he declared, "yet I have full faith in the wisdom of President Wilson being able to select a discreet and able successor to Secretary Bryan and that Secretary Bryan will not embarrass the administration with any antagonisms of these differences. I believe the foreign policy of our government has been wisely administered up to the present, but the near future may develop arbitration."

Some other Democrats here would not be quoted on the subject. Some local admirers of Bryan, however, who have always followed him in his various political diversions, regret that he has not stood up under fire. Others were bitter in their denunciation of him because they believed it would damage the cause of the Democratic administration.

"We can get along without him," remarked one Democrat this morning with some heat, referring to Bryan, and that expressed the opinion of many.

FAMILY HAD CLOSE CALL

House Was in Flames When Occupants Awakened

A small house on the Mrs. Charles Hugo farm, west of the city, was destroyed by fire last night at eleven o'clock. Thomas Groves and family lived in the house and the family had a narrow escape. Mrs. Groves was awakened by the smoke and found the entire back part in flames. The house burned quickly and the family lost all of the household goods. The house was a three room structure and the fire is believed to have started from an over-heated stove in the kitchen. Mr. Groves is employed by William Posey.

The seventeenth annual reunion of the Rush-Fayette association will be held Sunday at Brookside park, Indianapolis. A program has been arranged and one of the features will be the basket dinner at noon.

CHIROPRACTOR ARRESTED TODAY

William H. Monks, Accused of Practicing Medicine Without License Contrary to Law.

THREE CHARGES ARE FILED

Affidavits Signed by Dr. W. T. Gott, Secretary of State Board of Medical Examiners.

William H. Monks, of the firm of Monks and Monks, chiropractors, was arrested today on three charges of practicing medicine without a license, filed by the state board of medical examiners. He was arraigned before Judge Sparks and was released on bond in the sum of $50 in each case.

The affidavits were filed by Dr. William T. Gott of Crawfordsville, secretary of the state board of medical examiners. In the three affidavits, William H. Monks is charged with "unlawfully engaging in the practice of medicine, surgery and obstetrics" without a license contrary to the law.

Three separate offenses are charged. The first affidavit alleges that he practiced without a license on May 5; the second on May 10 and the third on May 17. The affidavits were approved by Prosecutor Stevens.

The firm of Monks and Monks has offices in Shelbyville and Rushville. Their local office is located on the second floor of the Miller law building and they have been here for about six months. William H. Monks has engaged the law firm of Watson, Tittworth and Green to defend him, and the case promises to be hard fought, as the firm of Kiplinger & Smith has been employed by the state board to assist in the prosecution.

The case here is one of the many that have been filed in the state against chiropractors. In practically every city in which they have been doing business the state has filed charges. An attempt was made at the last session of the legislature to get a bill through which would place the chiropractors under a state board and place them on the level with physicians. The bill failed to pass.

Mr. Monks appeared in the court with his attorney, but did not enter a formal plea to the charges.

ORDERED TO STOP THEIR PURCHASES

American Business Men in Berlin Asked to Preserve Funds Pending the Negotiations.

IDEA OF LEAVING IS SCOUTED

By CARL W. ACKERMAN.
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Berlin, June 9.—American business men here have received orders from America to discontinue their purchases and preserve their funds pending the outcome of the Lusitania negotiations.

George Atwood, secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce, scouted the idea that there was serious danger of a break.

"No one here is at all afraid," said Atwood. "If diplomatic relations are broken off American business men will not leave Berlin."

EXCURSIONISTS HAVE GOOD TIME

Cincinnati Tourists Compliment Authorities for Excellent Accommodations Received.

TWO SECTIONS COMING HOME

Premature Scare When Marian Carney Was Lost, But She Was Later Found on the Train.

More than nine hundred excursionists arrived here last night between nine and ten o'clock from Cincinnati where they spent the day. The occasion was a picnic arranged by the Christian Sunday Schools of Rushville and Winchester, Ky., which some time ago held a contest.

The train left here yesterday morning at seven o'clock and arrived in Cincinnati at nine-fifteen and practically all of the excursionists were at the Zoo by ten o'clock or shortly afterwards. About one hundred and fifty persons had to stand up on the way down because the crowd was larger by two hundred persons than was anticipated.

Coming home, however, the C. H. & D. arranged to care for the crowd and two trains were provided, the first train leaving Cincinnati at seven o'clock and arriving here at nine-fifteen and the second section following close behind. The street car company lacked two cars of having enough to haul the crowd to the Zoological Gardens because there were so many more people than were expected. It was not long, however, until enough cars had been provided.

Many of the excursionists today were praising the railroad, and street car companies and the Zoo authorities for the excellent accommodations. Everything moved off smoothly and there were no unavoidable delays.

Coming home, though, there was a premature scare which caused some uneasiness but which amounted to nothing in the end, because Marian Carney, the little daughter of Clarence Carney, was thought for a time to have been lost.

Mr. Carney placed her on the second section of the returning train with Mrs. Kelso and the little daughter of Henry Wilson. There were no seats in the car and Mr. Carney started out to find one. When he returned Mrs. Kelso and the children were gone. Mr. Carney was worried but before the train arrived he learned that they had found seats on the first section.

DIRECTORS ARE TO MEET

Chamber of Commerce Board Called For Friday Night

The board of directors of the Rush County Chamber of Commerce will meet Friday evening at seven-thirty o'clock in the office of the president, S. L. Trabue, for the purpose of fixing up plan for the collection of dues. The dues were recently reduced to twenty-five cents a month, payable quarterly. The directors will also consider a suggestion to call a meeting of the boosters for the Dixie Highway "airline" route from Cincinnati by way of Brookville and Rushville.

FRANK'S APPEAL DENIED.

(By United Press.)

Atlanta, June 9.—Leon M. Frank failed today with his appeal to the state prison board of a commutation of sentence of death to life imprisonment. The adverse recommendation to the governor was made by a majority of two to one.

PROGRAM IS COMPLETE NOW

Talent For Annual Rush County Chautauqua to be Held First Eight Days in August

ALL PLACES ARE FILLED NOW

Rush County Teachers Institute Will be Held in The Graham Annex Auditorium

The program for the annual Rush county chautauqua, which will be held this year the first eight days in August, beginning on Sunday and closing on Sunday, as usual, has been completed. There was a partial announcement of the talent the other day, but at that time the program committee had not placed all the talent and did not have the daily program outlined.

The annual Rush county teachers' institute will be held in connection with the chautauqua as is the custom here, some of the institute speakers having a place on the chautauqua will be held in the auditorium of the Graham Annex school building, instead of the court house assembly room, where sessions were formerly held. The complete program is as follows:

Sunday August the First

A Hat For Every Gown

Nowadays it is the rule of the well dressed woman to buy less expensive hats and more of them.

Instead of one or two elaborate creations she prefers a collection of more reasonably priced chapeaux so that she may have a hat for every gown.

And milady's modiste has risen to the variety of attractive headgear to sell at modest prices.

Just now the quotations for millinery are unusually attractive as anyone can tell who watches the advertising columns of The Daily Republican.

ATTENTION, Ladies and Misses!

Look these brands over Carefully. They will do to tie to
 "Redfern"—Ladies' and Misses' "Ready to Wear."
 "Carter" and "Mentor"—Underwear
 "Warners"—Rust Proof Corsets
 "Kaysen"—Silk Hose and Silk Gloves
 "Topsy"—Non-tearable Hose for Children
 "Paul Jones"—Middies and Blouses
 "Kirsch"—Adjustable Extension Rod
 "May Manton"—Patterns

Fix these firmly in your minds together with the fact that they cost no more than others. Then bring your money where it will bring you the best possible returns.

RESULTS SHOWN BY CAMPAIGN

Department of Agriculture Making Headway Teaching "Diversification" of Crops.

SOME ARE VERY AMUSING

Urges That Robins and Bluebirds be Encouraged—Pig Clubs Proving Successful.

(By United Press.)

Washington, June 9.—"Diversification" of crops is one of the scientific farming tenets being pointed home today by the Department of Agriculture. It is getting results, but some of the results of the campaign are amusing as well as gratifying. An expert of the Department received word from a southern farmer that he was "diversifying" by quitting sugar planting and using all his land instead to raise tomatoes.

The Department's plan is to foster production of home gardens, encourage thrift by teaching the people to can fruit and vegetables for home use—to have farmers grow their own hay, peas, corn, potatoes, oats and some cane or sorghum for syrup, and to produce their own meat supply, if possible. In the south the Department's experts are particularly driving in the idea that there is almost always some waste land which could be profitably used to raise live stock for the family meat supply at least.

"Encourage the robin and bluebird" is the advice of the Department of Agriculture biologists. These birds will more than compensate for occasional depredations by the assistance they render in killing undesirable insects, according to the experts.

They can be prevented from eating desirable fruits, it is pointed out, by providing them with a supply of wild ones for winter diet when insect food is scarce.

An aerial machine which can fly 2,400 miles without a stop is a marvel to which attention is called by the Department of Agriculture in a bulletin on bird migration. "The golden plover is the record breaking flyer, it is stated. The bird can make the 2,400 miles in 48 hours, too, and use only two ounces of fuel in the shape of body fat. The bird observers also note that a thousand-pound aeroplane, if as economical with fuel, would consume only one pint of gasoline in a 200 mile flight. The to-and-fro motion of a bird's wings, it is related, also appears uneconomical, compared to the almost total lack of lost motion in an aeroplane's propeller.

Warning against the European pine moth as a ravager of forests is being issued by the Forestry Bureau. This pest eats out the new buds in such a way that timber is permanently and seriously damaged. As the moths feed mostly on young trees between 6 and 15 years old, it stunts their growth. Some trees are rendered unsightly, crippled and of no commercial value.

Destruction of the infected buds is the only way found so far of combating the new pest. Insecticides will not reach it after it gets into winter quarters. Pruning of the infected buds and twigs is said to be the most successful ruse against the moth. A trace of pitch at the base of the hole where the larvae enters is the test to find the pine moth.

"Pig clubs" are a new enterprise attracting increased success this spring and summer, according to reports being received daily at the Agricultural Department. A "pig club" is practically a contest of boys—and girls, too—in raising pigs. Bankers are lending money to the children to buy a pig to raise.

The new movement to encourage children to take an interest in agriculture generally and stock raising particularly is said to have started in Arkansas. It has attained great proportions in Georgia, where pig clubs are now operating in 14 counties, carried on by the banks which have lent money to purchase pure-bred pigs. In other counties promoters of pig clubs are advancing the money to the pig club members. In some places the boys and girls who wish to buy a pig get the money on their individual notes. In others the banks require endorsements of the parents. This movement instills thrift and often is the beginning of new bank accounts. One bank at Macon, Ga., has set aside $500 to loan to pig clubs.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY

(By United Press.)

Bloomington, Ind., June 9.—While a phonograph wheezed from the center of the athletic field today, a long distance runner ambled around the cinder oval of Indiana university. Several sprinters streaked it for the tape while trying to tread on the tails of a couple of whippet hounds. These were Coach Childs' hopeful track athlete. He uses the music to gauge the stride of the distance men and the hounds to pace the dash men.

THE BEST PROOF

Given by a Rushville Citizen.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they brought benefit.

The story was told to Rushville residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence.

Has proven the result lasting.

The testimony is home testimony.

The proof convincing.

It can be investigated by Rushville residents.

Harrison Levi, 931 N. Sexton St., Rushville, Ind., says: "I had to get up several times at night to pass the kidney secretions, which were sometimes attended with pain. I had severe backaches, too. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Johnson & Co.'s Drug store and it did not take them long to make me well. The pains left and the action of my kidneys became regular.

(Statement given June, 1910). OVER TWO YEARS LATER, Mr. Levi said: "I am still free from kidney weakness, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills."

—G. M. Arnold of Richmond spent last evening with friends in this city.

—John E. Osborn of Greensburg was in this city today on legal business.

—L. L. Broadus of Connersville spent the day on business in this city.

—Miss Hazel Beeler is spending a few days with relatives in Connersville.

—The Womans Home Missionary society of St. Paul's M. E. church will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. R. C. Hargrove, 120 West Seventh street. It will be the time for mite box opening and the election of officers will take place. The presence of all the members is urged.

—Miss Mary Louise Walker, daughter of Mrs. Alexander Walker, and Joseph S. Michael, well known people of Milroy were married yesterday by the Rev. Clyde S. Black. After a short trip they will be at home in Milroy, where Mr. Michael is the agent for the Big Four railway.

—The marriage of Miss Jessie Cronin of Richmond to Francis C. Moorman of this city took place this morning at eight o'clock at the St. Mary's Catholic church in Richmond. Mrs. Moorman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Cronin, and Mr. Moorman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moorman of this city.

—Miss Mary Moorman of this city a sister of the groom, was the bridesmaid and Ivan Coyne of this city, was the groomsman. Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home in Ninth street.

—The out of town guests who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moorman of Rushville, the bridegroom's parents, Miss Mary Moorman, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moorman and son Master Eugene Mrs. James Mullin and Miss May Madden and Ivan Coyne all of this city, James Cronin of New York City and Miss Ida Madigan and Miss Margaret Fulwiler of Dayton.

—Mr. Moorman and his bride will depart tonight for a short wedding trip and upon their return will be at home at 1003 South Eighth street, Richmond.

—The Misses Leonore and Alice Norris entertained this afternoon and will again this evening with "On The Old Plantation," which consisted of a program of songs and sketches of life on a southern plantation by Mrs. W. D. Long and son, W. Ballard Long, of Indianapolis formerly of Kentucky. The decorations gave appropriate setting for the readings and songs. There were over one hundred invitations out. A one-course luncheon was to be served this evening and the program continued.

—In the parlor was a miniature old garden, with lattice work representing the fence, and there was the gate, too. To add to the realism of the setting, small bales of cotton were placed about the house and on some of them rested little pickinny dolls.

—The parlor was a mass of flowers and plants. The twining wisteria, which was in bloom, made the program more realistic because one of Mrs. Long's sketches opened with reference to wisteria. Then there were palms, ferns, asparagus, roses, geraniums, honeysuckle and peonies. The dining room was decorated with cherry twigs bearing ripe fruit hanging from the chandelier and baskets of roses on the table.

—Mrs. Homer Bell of Huntington, West Virginia, who, with her daughter, Miss Lillian, are the house guests at the Norris home, dressed as a colored mammy, received the guests and introduced them in colored dialect.

—The songs on the program were so arranged that they gave atmosphere for the readings. Mrs. Long is a native of Georgetown, Kentucky, and comes from the old Virginia families of Ballards, Brents, Hordes and Dabneys' who were Kentucky pioneers and have long figured as leading citizens of that state. She has a charm and grace that make her sketches exceptional rather than ordinary. She possesses the native charm of a typical Kentucky woman with the additional pleasing voice and droll manner characteristic of a southern woman.

—Mrs. Kattie Gallimore went to Henderson this morning for a visit with Mrs. DeMoss.

—Miss Ethel Newhouse left this morning for a few days visit with friends in Warsaw.

—Mrs. Bert Leisure of Arlington went to Greensburg today for a visit with Miss Ethel Shelhorn.

Bryan's Resignation.

William J. Bryan, who late yesterday resigned as premier of the Washington cabinet, has been called an opportunist and some people—many of whom professed to be his friends—assert that his spectacular leave-taking at this critical time is conclusive proof that he acts always with self aggrandizement in view.

No matter what one's opinions in regard to Mr. Bryan's past actions may be, it must be generally admitted that his resignation at this time is a serious thing and that it did not come purely from patriotic motives. There is little doubt but that Bryan is a man who will capitalize public opinion, but is hard to believe that he would do it at the expense of his country's welfare. Internal disruption is the thing least to be desired in the present controversy with Germany because the old adage that a house divided against itself can not stand still holds good.

Whether the prediction is true that Mr. Bryan is preparing himself to enter the presidential campaign on a prohibition and peace plan remains to be seen. If he becomes a candidate the assertion that he is an opportunist will be verified in the eyes of many. Mr. Bryan, although the sentiment in this country is overwhelmingly in favor of peace, will find that the people of the nation are willing to go a long distance to preserve the tranquility of the country, but that they will not sacrifice the nation's honor by turning the other cheek.

Increase in Foodstuffs.

The regular monthly statement of the foreign trade sent out from Washington finds that the net increase in our total exports has been wholly in foodstuffs and in that item of foodstuffs which covers those in crude condition and food animals.

This is further conclusive proof that the war in Europe which laid bare the workshops and recruited their workers for the armies is responsible for the balance of trade coming to this side. There was a big increase in exports for April, the last month on which figures have been compiled, and there is a steadily declining reduction of imports, all of which tends to prove the conclusion that the resources of Europe are gradually being reduced by the war and the great countries which are at each others necks are less and less of producers every month.

The monthly statement contends that there has been an absolute increase in ten months of importations of foodstuffs partly or wholly manufactured. The larger part of the total shrinkage of total imports has been in the items of manufactures and particularly in that of manufactures ready for consumption. The increase in exports for April arises from the exportation of horses in that month to the value of $7,088,811 and of mules to the value of $2,334,744, all for war purposes.

Wheat Yield About Same.

The United States bureau of crop estimates forecasts June 1 the probable wheat yield in Indiana will be 43,200,000 bushels, and in the United States 949,000,000 as against a yield of 43,239,000 bushels in Indiana, and 891,917,000 in the United States in 1914. This plainly indicates that there is going to be very little difference between the production of wheat generally in the United States this year and last. The opinion was advanced by many when the European war broke out last August that the wheat acreage would be immensely increased because of the prospect of the United States having to feed the people of Europe. If this was general enough, there certainly is a reduction in the yield per acre. On the other hand, there were many farmers who did not appreciate what the future held in store when war for an indefinite period became a fixed certainty.

When the trees in the court house yard get large enough to afford any shade, there undoubtedly could not be any objection if benches were placed on the lawn and people were allowed some recreation there. It appears that the lawn about the court house is a spot that has not been utilized to its fullest extent.

Sleep Without Drugs.

"Doc, how can I get to sleep without using dope?" asked a man troubled with insomnia of a noted physician.

"On going to bed assume a comfortable attitude in which every muscle is relaxed," said the doctor, "but not the attitude in which you are accustomed to go to sleep, though something resembling it. Every movement, even coughing and yawning, must be strictly repressed, especially the desire to turn over. Maintain the same attitude without change, constantly resisting the longing to move or turn over. As a rule, by the end of fifteen or twenty minutes of this you will find yourself growing very drowsy and then, just as the desire to roll over becomes absolutely uncontrollable turn with the least possible effort and assume the position in which you habitually go to sleep. Natural sleep should follow at once. This method seldom fails. Give it a thorough trial at least before resorting to a drug to bring sleep."—Buffalo Express.

Heated Bearings.

Sometimes when a bearing becomes heated and requires oil it will be found that the oil will not flow down in the oil hole. Either the hole is clogged with dirt or the heat may cause the air to rise and prevent the oil from entering. Where a wire cannot be used effectively the following remedy, although it is not infallible, is almost sure to make the oil reach the bearing.

Fill the hole with oil and quickly place the thumb over it to prevent the air from escaping, and if the oil cup does not leak the heated air inside will rise above the oil, and in two or three minutes it will be forced into the bearing, even if it has to pass considerable dirt.

When a bearing cannot be reached in this way and when light oils, such as kerosene, are ineffective, try placing a little mercury in the oil hole and allow it to remain a few minutes, then use oil.—World's Advance.

After All His Trouble.

Two men were hurrying along Park row when the wind seemed to be blowing from all directions to the peril of umbrellas and anything not firmly anchored. One of them noticed the handle of a wrecked umbrella which had been thrown into the street along with many others and, stopping to pick it up, remarked to his companion that it was too good to pass. As he stooped a gust of wind captured his hat, and it went spinning along toward St. Paul's chapel, he after it. He ran into a man, slipped, fell in the mud and arose in time to see his hat run over by a truck. At a nearby restaurant, where he was drying his clothes, he said: "I lost a five dollar hat and spoiled a suit of clothes for the handle of a thirty cent umbrella. That would not be so bad, but I see the handle is broken."—New York Tribune.

A Painting.

What is a painting? It is the language of the artist in which he expresses his thought, conception of mind or emotion of heart. Where a writer expresses himself in words, the artist expresses himself in colors, light and shadows. An author's description of a place, person or object is but a word picture, while the artist's canvas stares us in the face, so to speak, flashing the subject continually before our eyes until we can grasp its every meaning without so much as turning a page. Thanks to our own Gilbert Stuart and his wonderful conception of the portrait of George Washington, it would take a paragraph or more to describe George Washington's mouth or nose, where Gilbert Stuart tells it to us in a few strokes of his masterful brush. —Elliot A. Hoaseman in National Magazine.

Ideal Politics.

What I wish first to insist upon is the essential worth, nobility, primary indeed, of the liberal pursuit of politics. It is simply the highest, the most dignified, the most important of all earthly objects of human study. Next to the relations of man with his maker there is nothing so deserving his best attention as his relation to his fellow men. The welfare of the community is always more important than the welfare of any individual or number of individuals, and the welfare of the community is the highest object of the study of politics.—Whitelaw Reid.

Two Master Writers.

It was an odd coincidence, but a striking one, that the greatest genius of England and the most masterful mind in Spain passed from earth on the same day. Shakespeare and Cervantes both died April 23, 1616, the former being only fifty-two years old, and the latter sixty-nine.

The Ladder.

"Yes, he's one of our leading citizens. He certainly has climbed high in a few years. Why, he holds our best federal job."

"Indeed! How did he get it?"

"His brother-in-law is our leading politician."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fine Distinction.

"There are some things about life that I don't understand."

"What now?"

"A man is looked up to if he moves in a circle and frowned down on if he belongs to a ring."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Extinguished.

"He was positively burning with love for her."

"Oh, it was all right. Her father put him out."

It is an everlasting duty, the duty of being brave. Valor is still value.

SERVICE

Of the three essentials—strength, organization and service—afforded to clients of this Bank, SERVICE is not the least important.

The Bank's entire organization is permeated with the spirit of service. It is not enough to accept and safeguard the banking and trust business of clients; every effort is put forth to be of additional active service, within the Bank's proper sphere.

For example, the Bank, if appointed, custodian of securities, will as agent sign ownership certificates required by the Federal Income Tax Law, collect dividends and coupons promptly as they mature, and either credit or remit the proceeds to the client; and will promptly notify him should any "rights" or other subscription privileges attach to the securities held.

Another example, clients are welcome to the Bank's facilities for investment and for investigating and analyzing the value of securities.

Many other examples of special service to clients might be mentioned, all of which would help to explain the rapid and substantial growth of this Bank's business.

HUNDRED MILE AUTO RACE TODAY

Some of World's Fastest Drivers Entered in Speed Event Staged at Galesburg, Ill.

RALPH DEPALMA WILL DRIVE

Winner of Indianapolis Race Will Not Use Same Car, However, Because it is Disabled

BY MAURICE E. SHUNICK, JR.
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Thousands of speed fans from all parts of the Middle West arrived in Galesburg during the night to be on hand for the 100 mile auto race here today.

Some of the world's fastest drivers were entered in the classic run today. The race is being run at the Galesburg mile track, acknowledged to be the fastest and only dead level racing course in the world.

It was anticipated that old records would be broken. Last year Ralph Mulford set a new world's record for a dirt track and the course was not in the best of shape owing to previous rains. Mulford won the one hundred mile race in a spectacular finish, after Bob Burman ran out of gasoline. Burman led nearly 99½ miles.

The following week at Minneapolis, Minn., the world's records established here were beaten.

Tom Alley and Eddie O'Donnell, driving Duesenberg cars were picked by hundreds of speed fans to win the race. This was due to the fact that they both made such a fine showing in the Indianapolis race on Decoration Day. Chandler, driving the third Duesenberg car was expected to figure in the money.

Andy Burt was believed by some to be a "dark horse" and might spring up and take away the honors. Cooper, Brown, Ostewig, and McLeister was confident of making a fine showing. They declared their cars to be in shape and well able to withstand the test.

McLeister has been in Galesburg for the past two weeks and has hit a fast clip on a number of trial starts. He said the track was good for eight miles per hour. All the cars were in Galesburg last Saturday.

Ralph DePalma will drive his Mercedes Six. It was hoped that the winner of the Indianapolis race would be able to use the Mercedes Four, but this was impossible because of the fact that the car was badly disabled in the Indianapolis race, and is now undergoing repairs preparatory for the Chicago race, on June 19. John DePalma is driving a De Lage. Both were favorites of hundreds of fans, and they were expected to carry off some of the prize money.

John G. DeLong, who had charge of the Indianapolis race officiated as starter.

In addition to a number of prominent officials in the racing game are in attendance. F. E. Edwards of Chicago, who is general manager of the Chicago speedway, acted as referee. L. A. Hillman, official scorer of the Elgin and Chicago races, had charge of the scoring here. Charles Erbstein, a prominent attorney of Chicago, served as one of the judges. Fred Jenck of the Elgin course, also acted in an official capacity.

Hon. William Hale Thompson, Mayor of Chicago acted as Honorary Referee.

David Beecroft of New York, a member of the National Committee of the A. A. A. and R. H. Kennard of New York, Chairman of the Contest Board of the A. A. A. and Clifford Ireland, of Peoria, Illinois representative of the A. A. A. were among those in attendance. Chicagoans, fond of speed "merchants" who occupied seats in the grand stand were George F. Ballou, Jos. E. Callender, E. A. Turner, J. W. Maguire, S. E. Hibbens, Harry A. Tarantous, Darwin S. Hatch and David G. Joyce. They are all connected with the Chicago Automobile club.

MAY REGULATE FISTIC GAME

Promoters Take Kindly to Suggestion That National Governing Body be Formed

TOM ANDREWS BACKS MOVE

Uniform Rules Would be in Effect And Weights of Classes Would be Determined

BY BARRY FARIS
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

New York, June 9.—New York's boxing promoters—at least the progressive ones—are seriously considering the suggestion recently made that a national governing body be selected to control the fistic game. Plans are under way for a meeting to be held here next fall at which the organization of such a body will be perfected. Representatives from every state in which boxing is regulated by state laws are expected to attend.

Thomas S. Andrews, boxing writer and promoter of Milwaukee, Wis., is responsible for the suggestion. Andrews has been associated with the fight game for several years and has done much to elevate it to a higher plane. He believes that with a national governing body that would regulate the game, boxing would be permitted in many more states than it is now.

One thing the commission would settle first would be a scale of weights for the different championships. At present, weights for the different titles are shifted up and down to suit the pleasure of whoever happens to hold the championship at the time. Under a national commission this would be done away with. The lightweight championship, for instance, would have to be decided at 133 pounds. Recently it has been set at 135 pounds.

Uniform rules to govern boxing all over the country would be adopted also. At present various kinds of rules govern the game. In many western states boxers are permitted to hit in the breakaways. In New York and several other states where boxing is regulated by the laws the boxers have to "break clean." They are not allowed to hit when stepping out of a clinch.

A national body could also govern championships. No fighter would be permitted to hold a championship indefinitely without defending it. At present a champion can hold his title forever without risking it in a bout to a decision if he cares to do so.

Avaricious managers have also been a thorn in promoters' sides for a long time. A national governing body could in a large measure do away with this evil. Exorbitant demands by boxers could be regulated.

ARE BRUSHING UP THEIR EQUIPMENT

Devotees of Isaac Walton Prepare

For Good Fishing Season on The Indiana Lakes

LAWS HERE ARE LENIENT

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Ind., June 9.—Now that June the favorite fishing month is here the devotees of Isaac Walton are brushing up their equipment for a spin to Indiana lakes. This state is one of the most lenient states regarding fishing. There are no closed seasons except on parts of certain lakes which have been given over to spawning.

Ten thousand signs bearing the words "INDIANA STATE FISHING PRESERVE" and on which are instructions not to fish in that particular sport between March 20 and July 1 have been placed in parts of the lakes and streams of the state. But on other parts of lakes and streams one is permitted to catch fish at any time of the year.

There have been few changes in the fishing laws since two years ago. As usual rock bass under six inches must be thrown back into the water and black bass under ten inches must not be kept. Pike or pickerel under twelve inches are illegal and carry less than six inches must be thrown back into the waters.

The limit of twelve bass to one man is still in force. Two men fishing from the same boat are limited to twenty bass. Fifty crappies or blue gills is the limit for one days catch.

VEGETABLE CALOMEL

Vegetable calomel, extract of the root of the old-fashioned may-apple plant, does not salivate. As a liver stimulant, it's great. It's a perfect substitute for ordinary calomel (mercury); in fact, it's better, because its action is gentle instead of severe and irritating—and it leaves no mean, disagreeable after-effects. Physicians recognize this and prescribe may-apple root (podoophyllin, they call it) daily.

Combined with four other standard, all-vegetable remedies, may-apple root may now be had at most any druggist's in convenient sugar-coated tablet form by asking for Santanel Laxatives. If you forget the name, ask for the box that has the picture of the soldier on it.

These tablets are small, easy to take and are really wonderful little performers.

They quickly clean out the poisons that are causing you headache, constipation, sour stomach, biliousness, dizzy spells, bad breath and coated tongue.

They are mild. They never gripe. And they are a bowel tonic as well as a cleanser and liver regulator. A 10c box should last one several weeks. A Physician's trial package (4 doses) will be mailed you free if you write mentioning this advertisement. The Santanel Remedies Co., 802 Madison Ave., Covington, Ky.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

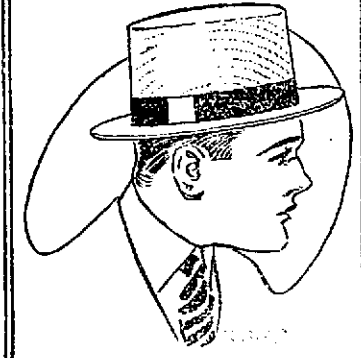

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

"Why Lenora didn't come on to you here I can't imagine," he said. "However, I'll go back to the hotel where she was to spend the night after she arrived. She may have gone back there. That's my address, Mrs. Willet. If you hear anything I wish you'd let me know. Lenora's quite a particular friend of mine and I am a little anxious."

Quest had already opened the front door for himself and passed out. He sprang into the taxi, which he had kept waiting.

"Clifford's hotel in Payne street," he told the man.

He lit a cigar and smoked furiously all the way, throwing it on to the pavement as he hurried into the quiet private hotel which a fellow passenger on the steamer had recommended as being suitable for Lenora's one night alone in town.

"Can you tell me if Miss Lenora Macdougall is staying here?" he asked at the office.

The woman shook her head.

"Miss Macdougall stayed here the night before last," she said, "and her luggage is waiting for orders. She left here yesterday afternoon to go to her aunt's, and promised to send for her things later on during the day. There they stand, all ready for her."

"What time did she go?"

"Directly after an early lunch. It must have been about two o'clock."

Quest hurried away. So after all there was some foundation for this queer sense of depression which had been hovering about him for the last few days!

"Scotland Yard," he told the taxi driver.

He thrust another cigar between his teeth, but forgot to light it. He was amazed at his own sensations, conscious of fears and emotions of which he would never have believed himself capable. He gave in his card, and after a few moments' delay he was shown into the presence of one of the chiefs of the detective department, who greeted him warmly.

"My name is Hardaway," the latter announced.

"My assistant, a young lady, Miss Lenora Macdougall, has disappeared! She and I and Professor Ashleigh left the steamer at Plymouth and traveled up in the boat train. It was stopped at Hamblin road for the professor and myself, and Miss Macdougall came on to London. She was staying at Clifford's hotel in Payne street for the night, and then going on to the aunt. Well, I've found that aunt. She was expecting the girl, but the girl never appeared."

"Where did this aunt live?" Hardaway inquired.

"No. 17, Princess Court road, West Kensington," Quest replied. "She had just moved there from Elmsmere road, Hampstead. I went first to Hampstead. Lenora had been there and learned her aunt's correct address in West Kensington. I followed on to West Kensington and found that the aunt was still awaiting her."

A new interest seemed suddenly to have crept into Hardaway's manner.

"Let me see," he said, "if she left Clifford's hotel about two, she would have been at Hampstead about half-past two. She would waste a few minutes in making inquiries, then she probably left Hampstead for West Kensington, say, at a quarter to three. Give me at once a description of the young lady," he demanded.

Quest drew a photograph from his pocket and passed it silently over.

"Mr. Quest," he said, "it is just possible that your visit here has been an exceedingly opportune one."

"Come along with me," he continued. "We'll talk as we go."

They entered a taxi and drove off westwards.

"Mr. Quest," he went on, "for two months we have been on the track of a man and a woman whom we strongly suspect of having decoyed half a dozen perfectly respectable young women, and shipped them out to South America."

"The white slave traffic!" Quest gasped.

"Something of the sort," Hardaway admitted. "Well, we've been closing the net around this interesting couple, and last night I had information brought to me upon which we are acting this afternoon. We've had them watching and it seems that they were sitting in a tea place about three o'clock yesterday afternoon when a young woman entered who was obviously a stranger to London. You see, the time fits in exactly, if your assistant decided to stop on her way to Kensington and get some tea. She asked the woman at the desk the best means of getting to West Kensington without taking a taxicab. Her description tallies exactly with the photograph you have shown me. The woman whom my men were watching addressed her and offered to show her the way. They left the place together. My men followed them. The house has been watched ever since and we are raiding it this afternoon. You and I will just be in time."

He stopped the cab and they got out. A man who seemed to be strolling aimlessly along reading a newspaper suddenly joined them.

"Well, Dixon?" his chief exclaimed.

The man glanced around.

"I've got three men round at the back, Mr. Hardaway," he said. "It's impossible for anyone to leave the place."

Hardaway paused to consider a moment.

"Look here," Quest suggested, "they know all of you, of course, and they'll never let you in until they're forced to. I'm a stranger. Let me go. I'll get in all right."

"All right," he assented. "We shall follow you up pretty closely, though."

Quest stepped back into the taxi and gave the driver a direction. When he emerged in front of the handsome gray stone house he seemed to have become completely transformed. There was a fatuous smile upon his lips. He crossed the pavement with difficulty, stumbling over the steps, and held on the knocker with one hand while he consulted a slip of paper. He had scarcely rung the bell before a slightly parted curtain in the front room fell together and a moment later the door was opened by a man in the livery of a butler, but with the face and physique of a prize-fighter.

"Lady of the house," Quest demanded.

"Want to see the lady of the house?"

Almost immediately he was conscious of a woman standing in the hall before him.

"You had better come in," she invited. "Please do not stand in the doorway."

Quest, however, who had heard the footsteps of the others behind him, loitered there for a moment.

"You're the lady whose name is on this piece of paper?" he demanded.

"This place is all right, eh?"

"I really do not know what you mean," the woman replied coldly; "but if you will come inside I will talk with you in the drawing room."

Quest, as though stumbling against the front door, had it now wide open, and in a moment the hall seemed full. The woman shrieked. The butler suddenly sprang upon the last man to enter and sent him spinning down the steps. Almost at that instant there was a scream from upstairs. Quest took a running jump and went up the stairs four at a time. The butler, who had so far defied arrest, suddenly snatched the revolver from Hardaway's hand and fired blindly in front of him, missing Quest only by an inch or two.

"Don't be a fool, Karl!" the woman called out. "The game's up. Take it quietly."

Once more the shriek rang through the house. Quest rushed to the door of the room from whence it came, tried the handle, and found it locked. He ran back a little way and charged it. From inside he could hear a turmoil of voices. White with rage and passion, he pushed and kicked madly. There was a shot from inside, a bullet came through the door within an inch of his head, then the crash of broken crockery and a man's groan. With a final effort Quest dashed the door in and staggered into the room. Lenora was standing in the far corner, the front of her dress torn and blood upon her lips. She held a revolver in her hand, and was covering a man whose head and hands were bleeding. Around him were the debris of a broken jug.

"Mr. Quest!" she screamed. "Don't go near him—I've got him covered. I'm all right."

Quest drew a long breath. The man who stood glaring at him was well dressed and still young. He was unarmed, however, and Quest secured him in a moment.

"The girl's mad!" he said sullenly. "No one wanted to do her any harm."

Hardaway and his men came trooping up the stairs. Quest relinquished his prisoner and went over to Lenora.

"I've been so frightened," she sobbed. "They got me in here—they told me that this was the street in which my aunt lived—and they wouldn't let me go. The woman was horrible. And this afternoon this man came. The brute!"

Quest turned to Hardaway.

"I'll take the young lady away," he said. "You know where to find us."

Lenora had almost recovered when they reached the hotel. Walking up and down they found the professor.

"My friend!" he exclaimed—"Mr. Quest! It is the devil incarnate against whom we fight!"

"What do you mean?" Quest demanded.

The professor wrung his hands.

"I put him in our James II prison," he declared. "Why should I think of the secret passage? No one has used it for a hundred years. He found it, learned the trick—"

"You mean," Quest cried—"He has escaped!" the professor broke in. "Craig has escaped again! They are searching for him high and

Craig Escapes From the Cellar.

low, but he has gone!"

Quest's arm tightened for a moment in Lenora's. It was curious how he seemed to have lost at that moment all sense of proportion. Lenora was safe . . . the relief of that one thought overshadowed everything else in the world.

"The fellow can't get far," he muttered.

"Who knows?" the professor replied, dolefully.

They had been standing together in a little recess of the hall. Suddenly Lenora, whose face was turned toward the entrance doors, gave a little cry. She took a quick step forward.

"Laura!" she exclaimed, wonderingly. "Why, it's Laura!"

They all turned around. A young woman had just entered the hotel, followed by a porter carrying some luggage. Her arm was in a sling and there was a bandage around her forehead. She walked, too, with the help of a stick. She recognized them at once and waved it gayly.

"Hullo, you people!" she cried.

"Soon run you to earth, eh?"

They were for a moment dumfounded. Lenora was the first to find words. "But when did you start, Laura?" she asked. "I thought you were too ill to move for weeks."

The girl smiled contemptuously.

"I left three days after you, on the Kaiser Frederic," she replied. "There was some trouble at Plymouth, and we came into Southampton early this morning, and here I am. Say, before we go any further, tell me about Craig."

"We've had him," Quest confessed, "and lost him again. He escaped last night."

"Where from?" Laura asked.

"Hamblin house."

"Say, is that anywhere near the south coast?" the girl demanded excitedly.

"It's not far away," Quest replied, quickly. "Why?"

"I'll tell you why," Laura explained.

"I'll Give a Ten-Pound Note to Anyone Who Gets Me Out to the Barton Before She Sails."

"I was as sure of it as anyone could be. Craig passed me in Southampton water this morning, being rowed out to a steamer. Not only that, but he recognized me. I saw him draw back and hide his face, but somehow I couldn't believe that it was really he. I was just coming down the gangway and I nearly fell into the sea. I was so surprised."

Quest was already turning over the pages of the timetable.

"What was the steamer?" he demanded.

"I found out," Laura told him. "I tell you, I was so sure of it, it's being Craig that I made no end of inquiries. It was the Barton, bound for India, first stop Port Said."

"When does she sail?" Quest asked.

"Tonight—somewhere about seven," Laura replied.

Quest glanced at the clock and threw down the timetable. He turned toward the door. They all followed him.

"I'm for Southampton," he announced.

"I'm going to try to get on board that steamer before she sails. Lenora, you'd better go upstairs and lie down. They'll give you a room here. Don't you stir out till I come back. Professor, what about you?"

"I shall accompany you," the professor declared.

"And nothing," Lenora declared, firmly, as she caught at Quest's arm, "would keep me away."

"I'll telephone to Scotland Yard, in case they care to send a man down," Quest decided.

They caught a train to Southampton, where they were joined by a man from Scotland Yard. The little party drove as quickly as possible to the docks.

"Where does the Barton start from?" Quest asked the piermaster.

The man pointed out a little way down the water.

"As a Pleasure Cruise," Quest remarked, "This Excursion Seems to Be a Success."

Quest's little party, and himself arranged the seats.

They settled down into the places arranged for them.

An elderly lady, dressed in somewhat oppressive black, with a big cameo brooch at her throat and a black satin bag in her hand, was being shown by the steward to a seat by Quest's side. She acknowledged the captain's greeting acidly.

"Good evening, captain," she said. "I understood from the second steward that the seat on your right hand would be reserved for me. I am Mrs. Foston Rowe."

The captain received the announcement calmly.

"Very pleased to have you at the table, madam," he replied. "As to the seating, I leave that entirely to the steward. I never interfere myself."

Laura pinched his arm, and Lenora glanced away to hide a smile. Mrs. Foston Rowe studied the menu disapprovingly.

"Hors d'oeuvres," she declared, "I never touch. No one knows how long they've been opened. Bouillon—I will have some bouillon, steward."

"In one moment, madam."

The professor came ambling along towards the table.

"I fear that I am a few moments late," he remarked, as he took the chair next to Mrs. Foston Rowe. I offer you my apologies, captain. I congratulate you upon your library. I have discovered a most interesting book upon the habits of seagulls. It kept me engrossed until the very last moment, and I am hungry."

"Well, you'll have to stay hungry a long time at this table then," Mrs. Foston Rowe snapped. "Seems to me that the service is going to be abominable."

The steward, who had just arrived, presented a cup of bouillon to Quest. The others had all been served. Quest stirred it thoughtfully.

"And as to the custom," Mrs. Foston Rowe continued, "of serving gentlemen before ladies, it is, I suppose, peculiar to this steamer."

Quest hastily laid down his spoon, raised the cup of bouillon and presented it with a little bow to his neighbor.

"Pray allow me, madam," he begged. "The steward was to blame."

Mrs. Foston Rowe did not hesitate for a moment. She broke up some toast in the bouillon and commenced to sip it.

The spoon suddenly went clattering from her fingers. She caught at the sides of the table, there was a strange look in her face. With scarcely a murmur she fell back in her seat. Quest leaned hurriedly forward.

There was a slight commotion. The doctor came hurrying up from the other side of the saloon. He bent over her and his face grew grave.

"What is it?" the captain demanded. The doctor glanced at him meaningly.

"She had better be carried out," he whispered.

"Was it a faint?" Lenora asked.

"We shall know directly," the captain replied. "Better keep your places I think. Steward, serve the dinner as usual."

The man held out his hand to withdraw the cup of bouillon, but Quest drew it towards him.

"Let it wait for a moment," he ordered.

He glanced at the captain, who nodded back. In a few moments the doctor reappeared. He leaned down and whispered to the captain.

"Dead!"

Quest turned around.

To be continued.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE SHIP OF HORROR.

Quest leaned a little forward and gazed down the line of steamer chairs.

The professor, in a borrowed overcoat and cap, was reclining at full length, studying a book on seagulls which he had found in the library. Laura and Lenora were both dozing tranquilly. Mr. Harris of Scotland Yard was deep in a volume of detective stories.

"As a pleasure cruise," Quest remarked grimly, "this little excursion seems to be a complete success."

Laura opened her eyes at once.

"Trying to get my goat again, eh?" she retorted. "I suppose that's what you're after. Going to tell me, I suppose, that it wasn't Craig I saw aboard this steamer?"

"We are all liable to make mistakes," Quest observed, "and I am inclined to believe that this is one of yours."

Laura's expression was a little dogged.

"If he's too clever for you and Mr. Harris," she said, "I can't help that. I only know that he came on board. My eyes are the one thing in life I do believe."

"If you'll excuse me saying so, Miss Laura," Harris ventured, leaning deferentially towards her, "there isn't a passenger on board this ship, or a servant, or one of the crew, whom we haven't seen. We've been into every stateroom, and we've even searched the hold. We've been over the ship, backwards and forwards. The captain's own steward has been our guide, and we've conducted an extra search on our own account. Personally, I must say I have come to the same conclusion as Mr. Quest. At the present moment there is no such person as the man we are looking for on board this steamer."

"Then he either changed into another one," Laura declared obstinately, "or else he jumped overboard."

"Come on, Harris, you and I promised to report to the captain this morning. I don't suppose he'll be any too pleased with us. Let's get through with it."

The two men walked down the deck together. They found the captain alone in his room, with a chart spread out in front of him and a pair of compasses in his hand. He turned round and greeted them.

"Well?"

"No luck, sir," Quest announced. "Your steward has given us every assistance possible, and we have searched the ship thoroughly. Unless he has found a hiding place unknown to your steward, and not apparent to us, the man is not on board."

The captain frowned slightly.

"You are not suggesting that this is possible, I suppose?"

"Quest did not at once reply. He was thinking of Laura's obstinacy."

"Personally," he admitted, "I should not have believed it possible. The young lady of our party, however, who declares that she saw Craig board the steamer, is quite immovable."

"Brown," said the captain, turning to the steward, "I understand that you say that you have taken these gentlemen into every corner of the ship, that you have ransacked every possible hiding place, that you have given them every possible opportunity of searching for themselves?"

"That is quite true, sir," the man acknowledged.

"You agree with me that it is impossible for anyone to remain hidden in this ship?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"You hear, gentlemen?" the captain continued. "I really can do no more. What the mischief are you hanging about for, Brown?" he asked, turning to the steward, who was standing by with a carpet-sweeper in his hand.

"Room wants cleaning out badly, sir."

The captain glanced distastefully at the carpet-sweeper.

"Do it when I am at dinner, then," he ordered, "and take that damned thing away."

The steward obeyed promptly. Quest and Harris followed him down the deck.

"Queer-looking fellow, that," the latter remarked. "Doesn't seem quite at his ease, does he?"

"Seemed a trifle overanxious, I thought, when he was showing us round the ship," Quest agreed.

"Mem," Harris murmured, softly, "as the gentleman who wrote the volume of detective stories I am reading puts it, to keep our eye on Brown."

The captain, who was down to dinner unusually early, rose to welcome

Bohemians.
The term "Bohemian," applied to those who lead a certain style of life, originated in France, where it was first applied to the gypsies, who were erroneously supposed to be natives of Bohemia. At some time early in the nineteenth century the name came to be applied to persons of unsettled habits who did not observe the conventional rules of society. "Bohemia," the haunt of artists and students with little money, was in the Latin quarter of Paris and flourished, especially in the period of 1830. The classical description of it is contained in Henri Murger's "Scenes of the Life of Bohemia," which is published in several translations. Puccini's opera, "La Boheme," is founded on this famous book. As James Anthony Froude explains, the term Bohemian is not necessarily uncomplimentary. Speaking of Bohemians, he says, "I mean merely a class of persons who prefer adventure and speculation to settled industry and who do not work well in the harness of ordinary life."—Philadelphia Press.

Hard Times.
Ernest was very big and very black, and when it came to sleeping and eating fully justified his name. Ernest did not fancy steady work, but he was apt to be available when spring came for odd jobs at a dollar a day and his dinner.

One spring he came in with a sheep-ish grin.
"Miss Sally, I been hearin' in de lodge meetin' 'bout dese hard times, an' I 'low I better raise my salary to a dollar an' a quarter a day."
"You're not worth that, Ernest, and you know it. Besides, I can't afford to pay more."
Ernest scratched his head; this was a matter for more thought than he had anticipated.

"I figured out when dey wuz takin' 'bout dem hard times dat I couldn't 'ford to work for no less. But"—his black face gleamed with a sudden thought—"I won't eat so much."—New York Post.

Eastern Scrub Pine.
A Lazarus of the forest is the eastern scrub pine, also called Jersey pine, a small, puny tree of poor and pitiful form, willing to subsist on the "crumbs" that fall from the table of others. It grows in New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and farther south and west. It creeps into open spaces and is the companion of sassafras and huckleberry bushes. Old, worn out, gullied fields appeal to this pine, because little else will grow there, and it is not obliged to fight for room. In course of time, however, as the impoverished soil begins to recover broad leaf seedlings come in. As these increase in size the scrub pines die and finally disappear. Though they have been in full possession of the ground, they are unable to hold it against competitors.

The Bashful Lover.
The girl who has a bashful suitor should cease lamenting the inconveniences of the situation and thank Providence for him. He will be very, very faithful. No need for heartburnings, no cause for jealousies, will arise in this connection. For not only have the other girls no time for him (a fact which, taken alone, is hardly a recommendation to the average woman, by the way), but he himself—oh, joy of joys!—will have no time for the other girls. And so the maiden who has a very bashful lover should cease repining. Once she has secured that eminently suitable person, it is up to her to train him and educate him in the way he should go. And there is no fear that he will ever depart from her.—Ellen Adair in Philadelphia Ledger.

And That's the Reason.
"Don't you want your nice bread and butter, Anne?" asked her father. Anne shook her head. "It's a shame to waste such nice bread and butter," continued her father. "I'll eat it myself." Anne watched the process with big eyes and a look of expectancy on her face.

Finally, when the last mouthful had disappeared, Anne asked, "Papa, did it tickle?"
"Tickle?" said her father. "Why, no. What do you mean?"
"I thought it would tickle," said Anne. "It had a long hair on it."—De-lineator.

May Have Started Him.
"I wonder how Columbus got the idea that the world was round?"
"I don't know that there is anything remarkable about his deductions. Any man along in middle age begins to get the idea that the world is not exactly square."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Perfume.
When you use perfume and call it such, do you think how the name came about? It means, in Latin, "from smoke," and the name proves that the first perfumes were only aromatic woods or gums that scented the air when burned.

Natural Result.
"What has become of your nephew?"
"The one who was so fond of books?"
"Yes."
"Oh, he became a page in the legisla-ture."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Languid Pets.
"These pampered dogs of the rich are rather listless, it seems to me."
"Yes; you never see one of them burying a marshmallow or worrying a chocolate drop."—Judge.

Evasive.

LABOR PROBLEM CAUSES WORRY

Following War England Faces Hard Proposition According to Bruno Lasker, of New York

KNOWS WHEREOF HE SPEAKS

Declares There is no Chance For Total Prohibition in His Country Sentiment Lacking

BY LOWELL MELLETT (U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, June 9.—"The dislocation of labor is the biggest problem England has on her hands next to a successful conclusion of the war, and even now the labor situation is receiving nearly as much attention from the newspapers and thoughtful public of England as the war."

This sentence is the summary of a long interview with Bruno Lasker of York, England, author of several works on labor problems, who is now in this country making a study of the questions of industrial efficiency and public works for S. Beebohm Rowntree. Mr. Lasker is the confidential secretary of Mr. Rowntree and the latter is a very close personal friend and advisor of Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Lasker can speak with considerable certainty of the labor situation in England today and of the attitude and purposes of the Liberal Government with regard to the labor problem. Mr. Lasker and Mr. Rowntree were among economists and social reformers who recently won the distinction in England for their work on the Land Inquiry Commission of the Liberal Party. This commission has published the most extensive and scientific study of the questions of land tenancy, housing conditions and rural labor problems ever put forth.

As a result of the recommendations made by the commission the Government was engaged in drafting legislation which it was about to submit to Parliament when the war broke out, and which, Mr. Lasker said will very likely be presented as soon as possible at the conclusion of the war. But while looking to those measures for substantial improvements, those gentlemen see the increased complication of the labor problem which will immediately be felt when the war is over and they are farsighted enough to begin now to study the question of what shall be done in England when peace has been declared.

"You must now be surprised if you see indications of what may seem to you a lack of patriotism among the British laboring men over this war," said Mr. Lasker. "They realize pretty thoroughly that the employing class is the only class that can possibly profit by the war and that the burdens of hardships are falling, and will continue to fall, on them. Peace propaganda has been carried on in England for many years and it was only last summer that the Labor Party conducted an educational campaign against armaments. Well some of this education has stuck, and the result is what is called the unpatriotic attitude of labor in England today."

Asked about the prohibition question in England Mr. Lasker said: "There is not the slightest chance of compulsory total prohibition. There is nothing like the amount of prohibition sentiment at home that I find in your country and what is more to the point, the British workers certainly resent the idea of prohibition as being aimed directly against their freedom of action. They understand clearly enough that the well-to-do classes are not likely to be affected by any prohibition law and again they are made to realize that the burden of war falls most heavily on them."

"Although the question of intemperance enters into the problem of industrial very largely, compulsory prohibition as a solution is impossible. The only thing to do in that direction is to create enough sentiment to make possible the enforcement of prohibition, or at least temperance, before any sweeping liquor statute is passed.

"But apparently the public and the press of your country does not grasp the fact that there is an actual dearth of labor in England today I have reports from all sections of England telling of the insufficiency of labor. The war is rapidly draining labor, and especially skilled labor, from the country. Why things have come to such a pass that the big manufacturers are going about trying to bribe workmen away from the plants of small concerns. Rather than drunkenness, the scarcity of war materials, and of all other supplies, for that matter is due to the fact that England today is forced to run her plants with unskilled labor and not enough of that. Now of course, it is impossible to keep up normal production on that basis, much less talk of increasing the output of goods. And every recruit added to the army makes the situation worse."

"But there is one way in which the employers of England have benefited temporarily by the war. There were indications that had this war not started there would have been a gigantic strike of all transport workers that would have tied up the whole country. That, for the time being, has been avoided but when the war is over things may come to a crisis."

CASEY PROMISES TO OBEY PAROLE

Convicted "Blind Tiger" Operator is Set Free Today When Taken Before Judge Sparks.

PROVISIONS ARE READ TO HIM

Newton Casey, convicted "blind tiger" operator, was released from the Rush county jail this afternoon on the parole issued by Governor Ralston. Casey appeared before Judge Sparks and the parole was read to him. The provisions which stated that the parole should be in effect as long as Casey remained away from places where liquors were sold and not again to engage in the sale of liquor were pointed out to him.

The question of the number of days, as pointed out by the governor, was cleared when it was shown that the associating charge came first and both fines had been taken into consideration. The amount of the fine remitted to Casey was $380, $90 on the associating charge and $290 on the "blind tiger" charge. Casey was highly elated to gain his freedom and promised the court that he would obey the provisions of the parole.

MUCH TRIED CASE STILL WITH A JURY

Maple-Johnson Suit, Over Which There Has Been Disagreement, is Not Decided Yet.

MULL CASE TO GO ELSEWHERE

GAVE MAPLE A DOLLAR.

The jury returned a verdict late this afternoon giving Maple one dollar damages and assessing the costs against Johnson.

The jury hearing the case of Clell Maple against Lafayette Johnson, on an account in which $45 was demanded, got the case this morning about eleven o'clock. At a late hour this afternoon the jury was still out and there was apparently a chance that it might disagree. The first time the case was tried the jury failed to agree.

A change of venue was asked this morning in the case of Eleanor B. Hall against George, Thomas and Leonidas Mull and Lotta Lee Lockwood to set aside a mortgage. The affidavit for a change of venue was filed by Mrs. Hall, who alleges she could not get a fair trial here. It has not yet been agreed as to what county will get the case.

The Russians are preparing to evacuate Lemberg according to unofficial dispatches reaching here today.

LONDON PAPERS SEE WAR AHEAD

Interpret Bryan's Resignation as Meaning That Conflict With Germany May Result

RECOGNIZED AS IMPORTANT

(By United Press.) London, June 9.—London newspapers interpreted the resignation of Secretary Bryan as an indication that President Wilson's rejoinder to Germany is so firmly phrased that war between United States and Germany may result.

The news that Bryan had left the cabinet was recognized as of great importance. The regular editions of papers had gone to press when the news was flashed.

"Secretary Bryan's resignation deals the last blow to the legend that President Wilson lacks nerve," said the Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial this afternoon.

"Mr. Wilson has given conclusive proof that his prolonged restraint was not timidity but the moderation of strength."
